Public Health Notice

Owing to the combined drouth and for other reasons many of the wells in the town are contaminated with Typhoid and other germs. The Board of Health, therefore, wishes to notify the public that as a precautionary measure all water from wells in the town should be boiled before being used.

P. GLEESON,

Chairman Board of Health

Dated October 1st, 1908.

Voters' List, 1908.

Municipality of the Town of Napanee, in the County of Lennox and Addington.

Notice is hereby given that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in sections 8 and 9 of the Ontario Voters' List Act the copies required in said section to be so transmitted or delivered of the List, made pursuant to said Act, of all persons appearing by the last revised assessment roll of the said municipality to be entitled to vote in the said municipality at elections for members of the Legislative Assembly, and at Municipal elections, and that the said list was first posted up in my office at Napanee on the 19th day of October 1908, and remains there for inspection. Electors are called upon to examine the said list and if any omissions or any other errors are found therein to take immediate proceeding to have the said errors corrected according to law.

Dated at Napanee, this 19th day of October, A. D., 1908.

W. A. GRANGE.

Municipal Clerk.

YOUNG MEN and WOMEN!

A Modern Business Education will increase

LOVING Source of all,
We on thy great name call
And give thee thanks
With grateful hearts we raise
Our joyful song of praise.
Thou who hast blest our days,
We give thee thanks.

LORD of the sun and rain,
Lord of the fruit and grain,
We give thee thanks.
For thy rich harvests stored,
For plenty on each board,
For all thy bounties, Lord,
We give thee thanks.

FOR life and strength and health,
Best of all earthly wealth,
We give thee thanks.
For these our friends so dear,
Gathered from far and near
This feast day of the year,
We give thee thanks.

A WALK THROUGH THE WOODS.

I passed thro' the woods one day,
In the bright and sunny May;
The sun shone bright in a cloudless sky,
The brooklet danced as it rippled by.
Painting the woods a lovely hue;
Violets dotted the heath around,
Dotted the valley and the mound.
Trilliums reared their tall proud

CENTREVILLE

Now that the elections are over everyone has settled down to business again. The vote here was an even one, thirty nine for each candidate. The Conservatives generally have from eight to ten of a majority here, but the couplet with the magnificent endorsement of Sir Wilfrid Laurier seems to have been the cause for the even break here.

Red Cross Heave Cure, will relieve quickly and finally effect a cure. 15c a quarter pound at Wallace's Drug Store.

I passed thro' the woods one day.
In the bright and sunny May:
The sun shone bright in a cloudless sky.
The brooklet danced as it rippled by.
Painting the woods a lovely hue:
Violets dotted the heath around,
Dotted the valley and the mound.
Trilliums reared their tall proud heads,
Looking with scorn on the dewy beds.
Of modest beauties robed in white,
Who infused about a subtle light.
Adder tongues bowed the blossoms bold,
As old Joe Pye some story told
Of ghosts and rebels of the past—
While I my footsteps homeward cast.
The sun set in the grand blue sky.
The brooklet danced as it rippled by.
The great world sang one joyous song,
"Spring has come—but not for long."

Composed by Bella Pomeroy, aged 11 years, Newburgh.

SELBY.

Hallowe'en was duly celebrated, false faces abounded. A few tricks were played, but no serious damage was done.

Miss May Hudgin, Picton, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Miss Annie McKim is sick with tonsillitis.

Quarterly service was well attended. Miss Minnie Breeze is spending a few days at Mr. D. R. Sexsmith's.

HEART MIRACLES

Suffocation, Fluttering, Palpitation, Acute Pains—Certain Signs of the Heart's Sickness—Dr. Agnew's Heart Cure Relieves in 30 Minutes.

In cases of heart trouble Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart has proved itself the quickest acting remedy in existence. It has stepped in when the victim of heart disease seemed beyond hope—in the last gasp—has stayed death's hand, and has proved a never-failing and permanent cure. It is an honest medicine and will do all claimed for it.

Dr. Agnew's Liver Pills are the cheapest liver corrector known. (9)

20th appeared in court here on Saturday morning. The case was dismissed, there being no evidence of any perjury.

Dr. Morley Currie's victory in Prince Edward is another notable Liberal triumph. Dr. Currie having been a useful member of the Provincial Assembly, retirement from politics. Toronto

The lateness of the season and the lessening of the make considered, there was a good offering on the Picton cheese board Friday afternoon.
Nineteen factories put up for sale 1255 colored cheese. The opening bid was 12 1-4 and the bidding was brisk to the close. At 12 1-2c, 800 sold; at 12 3-4c, 140 sold and 316 refused the latter price.

Kingston now has 15 cases of small-pox. Two new cases were reported Monday. The cases were traced to two hotels and several stores, and these will probably be closed up. The board has a big problem on its hands and realizes its responsibility. So far this year smallpox has cost the city $2500. Four more rooms have been fitted up at Fort Henry to cope with the disease.

Hon. Thomas Greenway, recently appointed to the Railway Commission died at the Windsor Hotel, Ottawa, on Friday last. He was 70 years of age. He was seized with asthma four weeks ago and heart failure developed.
He was formerly Premier of Manitoba and M. P. for Kildare in the last parliament. His remains were forwarded for interment at Crystal City, Manitoba. He leaves a widow, six sons and six daughters.

A doctor of eminence in Kingston says he believes in vaccination, but he does not believe in compulsion at the present time. The illness caused already to children by being pricked is far severer than if they suffered from the mild type of smallpox going about.
Fever is very frequent, swollen and discolored arms and in some cases great blotches over their bodies. The remedy is worse than the disease.

A sad case is reported from Madoc.
It appears that a girl named Edith Nicholls, who had been brought to this country by a girls' home association, was living with a farmer's family named Willard Rupert. The family told the girl they were going to send her back to the home, and she became despondent. She left the house and was not seen again. A few days later her body was found in one of the farmer's fields. An inquest was held, and the jury brought in a verdict of death from exposure. No blame was attached to anybody.

A new disease christened "electric ophthalmia" is said to threaten all users of electric light. According to two Dresden scientists, the damage is done the eye tissues by ultra-violet rays of the electric light, and cataract may ultimately be caused. The same investigators have discovered a simple preventive for electric ophthalmia in the shape of yellow or green spectacles, which they prophesy will become universal as electricity comes more and more into use as an illuminant.

GOOD FORM FOR THE DAY-AT-HOME

THE custom of having an informal afternoon at home when your friends may be sure of finding you in, shows no signs of waning. Indeed these informal entertainments have taken a great leap over the once popular evening receptions. They are the least expensive and the least exacting of winter hospitalities, and perhaps to these causes may be traced their popularity.

Women who have a large circle of acquaintances have many of these days in the season, while others are content with four. For instance one card may read, "Mrs. James Brown Elting, 123 Prospect Place. First and Third Thursdays." Another will read, "Mrs. John Green Wood, 459 Smithson Avenue. Wednesdays in December." One woman will be at home the entire season two afternoons in the month, while the other will concentrate on four days all within one month.

The matter of deciding this question lies with the woman herself. Either mode is equally good. It is simply a question of the demands of your social life. These cards are to be mailed in envelopes fitting the card exactly, sealed and mailed with a two cent stamp. No social correspondence should be sent by the penny post. The husband's name does not appear on cards for informal afternoons at home, but if there are daughters in the house old enough to be in society, then the cards should read, "Mrs. John Green Wood, the Misses Wood," etc.

The maid who opens the door and serves refreshment should be dressed all in black, with white collars and cuffs and white apron. She should have no color about her in any way. She should wear a small white cap with a tignon black bow.

A large platter should be left on the hall table where guests may drop their cards upon entering the house. No calls are made before three in the afternoon, but at that hour the hostess should be dressed, her rooms should be ready, her table prepared and everything in readiness to receive the guests.

The question of refreshments at these afternoons depends on two things—how many "at homes" you have, and how large a circle of friends you have. If you only have four afternoons-at-home, then a table should be set in the dining room, laden with sandwiches, cakes, candies, etc. At both ends of the table, a woman friend sits, one pouring tea or coffee, and the other serving a light punch of some kind. If you are going to be at home all the season and expect not over half a dozen women friends in an afternoon, it would be foolish to set a table and would give an atmosphere too formal to your rooms. In the latter case, it is better to have the maid bring in tea, or serve it yourself from a dainty tea table, and have sandwiches, cakes and candies in tiny glass dishes immediately at hand.

At these informal afternoons, guests enter the drawing room unannounced, but the hostess must rise to greet each new comer, and she always rises to bid them goodbye, even seeing them to the door. And the hostess must be very careful to see that all of her guests are properly and distinctly introduced to each other, as with few people in a room it would be most embarrassing not to know the name of the woman with whom you are talking.

The hostess at the afternoon-at-home wears a high neck gown, or one of the new collarless gowns—not too low neck, however—a dainty, simple house gown, light in color and texture. Shirt waists and odd skirts are in frightfully bad form. The gown should also have a slight train.

If the weather should prove in-

MODIFIED STYLES NOW

DIRECTOIRE SASHES

THE Directoire scare is over. The sheath skirt panic has subsided.

The world feminine has returned to normal, regular heart-beats. Styles for the season of 1908-9 are now fixed. They are simply the extreme styles as shown in September, gracefully modified to meet the needs of the conservative American woman.

From the very start of the sheath skirt panic, I have maintained in these columns that no well-bred, sane American woman would ever consider the mode seriously, neither would she accept the extreme Directoire styles. The sheath skirt has been seen only upon the stage and then in such productions as featured the feminine form divine, rather than dramatic interest or virile acting. It is now relegated, along with Salome dances, to the has-beens of a theatrical year barely begun.

The Directoire modes have left a stronger influence, but only in such general effects as snugger skirts, bigger reverses and long, narrow sleeves. The exaggerated Directoire hat, the wide swathing sash, the interminable train have all been tabooed by well-dressed women.

The sheath skirt now appears only in tunic effects, or an outer skirt of soft, clinging fabric, split up one side to display not "sheath hose," but a drop skirt, generally clouded with fine side-pleatings of sheerest material like chiffon or chiffon cloth.

A very popular combination is the drop skirt or princess slip of soft, clinging satin with an over-dress of veiling or very supple cloth. The satin under-slip is absolutely skin tight with no dust ruffle or pleating around the foot. Over this is draped a tunic effect that seems to fall from the shoulder to the hem in all one color, the bands or fringe used as a finish being in self tone. With this is worn a tucker or yoke and long sleeves of net, either in soft, contrasting color like ocre or mode, or dyed to match the cloth, while for very dressy effect a modified Directoire sash in self tone may be added. But at the best houses, strong contrasts in coloring between gown and trimming are not noted with the exception, perhaps, of a dash of black with white or colors.

A marked feature of the advancing season is the appearance of beautiful Louis, Directoire and Empire coats in bengaline or ottoman silk, a fabric suitable for day wear, never for evening. For all evening wraps, supple satins are preferred.

Bordered fabrics are much used, especially for tunic effects, and with the advancing season supple broadcloths in fancy designs are shown. Brown increases in popularity as the weather becomes colder, and it is an ideal winter shade, especially in the soft cloths and satins with hints of golden lights in their surface.

The illustrations offered to-day show how charming are the modified fall styles, brought within the scope and purse of the home-dressmaker.

First, you have the Directoire coat which would develop so admirably in Ottoman silk, which, by the way, is heavily corded. Plain satin, or a rich brocade would be used to build the high collar, open several inches across the front, the wide reverses, the cuffs and pocket lapels, but it must match in color the corded silk used in the coat. Or the plain satin may be embroidered or braided in self tone or in most harmonious shades. Very little lace is used in developing these Directoire accessories. The lace appears in the Directoire jabot, which consists of an enormous ruff, finished with a jabot, broad at the top and tapering to a mere point just above the waist line.

Very large buttons are used on the Directoire coats, many of them jeweled or enameled. If you cannot afford a handsome button of this sort, these cover molds with heavy satin or the silk used on the coat.

This is not a difficult pattern to develop. The back and side backs are in one piece but the fronts of the body portion are separate from the fronts of the skirt, and with the underarm gores are joined to them at the waist-line. This is simpler than an attempt to secure a straight line over the hips.

The complete Directoire gown shown is really a combination or modification of the tunic skirt and the Directoire bodice, joined by a Directoire sash. Eleven yards of silk will make this costume (and, think, we needed eighteen or twenty last season) with 2 1/4 yards of eighteen-inch net or lace for chemisette and sleeves. The pattern is suited to either cashmere, veiling or supple silks like messaline, and a bordered fabric may be used if desired. Again, the tunic and over-blouse may be outlined by braided bands or novelty trimming, and by far the prettiest effect for the chemisette will be secured if tucked net is used. It will be noted that here as in all Directoire modes, the long snug-fitting sleeve appears. The stout woman must carefully avoid trimming such a sleeve. She should employ only tucks laid very smooth and flat.

The high or mounted skirt, shown without a bodice attached, is worth the study of the home dressmaker. It combines the best points of the new, snug-fitting skirt, and suggests the much maligned of sheath skirt. It forms a splendid foundation for the use of the Directoire sash, shown in the fourth illustration.

This skirt is of circular pattern, the right side being lapped over the left. For tailored designs, it is cut walking length and finished with stitching and buttons. For more dressy wear, it can be developed in supple cloth, with hand embroidery, banding, braiding, or even fringe outlining the slash on the side, and a chiffon pleating beneath. It gives the best results if cut with quite a good train, also with the outlining trimming growing much narrower at the waist line.

Various Directoire girdles are also shown, with or without ends. The short ends, known as the postillion bow are much used for skirts cut to walking length, but the long ends give best results on trained skirts. The true Directoire sash is fastened on the left side in front and is finished with deep fringe.

Hints for the Hagg

The very thin woman with lined skin, beilpe turrows and wrinkles must treat, first, her state of mind, and then, her digestion. Generally, she is a "worrior." When she has no present trouble to fret over, she reaches out into the wide future and broods out rics, and are properly and distinctly introduced to each other, as with few people in a room it would be most embarrassing not to know the name of the women with whom you are talking.

The hostess at the afternoon-at-home wears a high neck gown, or one of the new collarless gowns—not low neck, however,—a dainty, simple house gown, light in color and texture. Shirt waists and odd skirts are in frightfully bad form. The gown should also have a slight train.

If the weather should prove inclement the maid at the door will remove the rubbers of guests, take their umbrellas, etc., before the latter enter the room. This not only protects the handsome carpets, but also relieves the guest of the burden of such garments while in the drawing room.

The hostess makes the conversation general and of interest to all the guests. She does not talk with Mrs. Brown for ten minutes about some matter of which Mrs. Jones knows nothing, yet she tries to avoid such stale topics as the weather. The successful hostess has a way of making everybody glad they came, and in some tactful way she makes all feel that they have done her a personal favor in dropping in for a call.

When a woman has these informal days-at-home, the friends who come to see her do not have to call again as they do after attending a formal reception. As stated before, informal afternoons at home are simply a set time when your friends may find you in. The hostess then owes a call to every friend who has attended any of these afternoons.

If a hostess has a very large circle of friends, and has no daughters to assist her in receiving, then it is better that she ask one or two of her intimate friends to receive with her, as no one person can entertain twenty friends at the same time. If a hostess sees some guest sitting in a corner sipping a solitary cup of tea, she should go up to her, and say:—"Mrs. Cummings, I want you to come over and meet Mrs. Brown," and escort her across the room, seating her by some friend whom she thinks would be congenial to her.

She does not let any one, no matter who they are, go from her house feeling neglected. A hostess should literally lose herself in making her guests feel comfortable.

Hints for the Hag

The very thin woman with lined skin, furrows and wrinkles must treat, first, her state of mind, and then, her digestion. Generally, she is a "worrier." When she has no present trouble to fret over, she reaches out into the wide future, and draws some trouble into her line of vision. She never sees the cheerful side of any question. She considers the cheerful, optimistic person frivolous and thriftless.

Let her learn to hope and then to smile, to do her work of to-day and leave to-morrow's work to care for itself. The over-forehanded woman is narrow-chested, stoop-shouldered and wrinkled.

You never saw a plump person who would admit having the blues. Cure the blues by learning how to hope, smile and laugh out loud, and you will find the first layer of adipose tissue appearing on your sunken chest and withered arms.

Encourage the growth of flesh by learning how to digest your food. Almost invariably the very thin woman is an enormous eater, but she does not assimilate her food. She does not masticate it, but literally bolts it without chewing. Learn how to chew your food. When alone make a practice of systematically chewing each mouthful ten times. Extremists say "chew each bit of meat thirty times." Do not be an extremist one day, and a backslider ever after.

Learn to eat less each time, but to eat oftener. Make your three daily meals lighter and sandwich in two extra meals. If you are most active during the morning, and have lunch at 1 or 1.30, then between 10.30 and 11 take a cup of hot milk with a cracker or a glass of eggnog and a bread and butter sandwich; or, if fond of fruit, try a banana sliced with sugar and cream or rich milk.

If you have an early lunch and late dinner, or dinner at mid-day and a late supper, then have your milk and crackers or fruit in the middle of the afternoon. And finally just before retiring, drink more warm milk. It will prove a sedative to tired nerves, as well as a flesh-builder. And all this milk should

THE WIFE AND MOTHER

Multitudes of Young Single Women Also Do Their Part.

Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all. — Proverbs xxxi, 29.

This is what the wise man tells of the ideal woman of his day. "A woman may be model, married or single, but not ideal. The ideal woman is the wife and mother. The model wife reigns as a queen in her home, exerting a tremendous influence in life's battle. Of the mother some one has well said: 'The hand that rocks the cradle guides the world.' Her constant presence with the children in the home, while the husband and father toil at his daily task, gives her the opportunity of exercising the preponderating influence of good or ill upon the characters of the children in the formative period of their lives. During these golden days the ideal mother will both by precept and example mold the minds and hearts of her children into beautiful symmetry."

THE YOUNG WOMAN

But there is a model single womanhood as well. Multitudes of Young women are single either by choice or by force of circumstances, and yet nobly do their part. We need but glance at the great companies of deaconesses in our various Christian churches who have taken up the work these last years, as the Sisters of Charity have for a much longer period of visiting the homes of sickness and poverty, bringing aid and comfort in the name of Christ, or the army of nurses in our hospitals who are as brave in their consecration to duty in the face of disease and contagion as the soldier who enlists for battle. Add to these the untold thousands of young women who quietly and modestly engage in services to eke out family expenses, to care for father or mother, or to educate for life's battle the younger brothers and sisters. So that many a man would say, if he told the whole truth, "I owe my position in life to my self-sacrificing sister." Shall we say of her as Gray in his "Elegy"—"full many a flower is born to blush unseen and waste its sweetness on the desert air?" No, the sweet sacrifice of such a life is not a waste, but rises as an "odor of sweet incense" to heaven.

THE IDEAL MOTHER.

How much fills the hands and heart of the ideal mother. The responsibility for rearing correctly, and the careful and proper training of the children necessarily rests upon her. To see that the children are properly fed and clothed, and with the passing years to educate properly and to be careful that the associates are all they should be, devolve largely upon her. Then there is the temptation to be too strict on the one hand or too lenient on the other. If the former, then the danger that when the day comes when the child is released from all parental restraint there be a rebound in the other direction and liberty be turned to license; if the latter, the danger that the liberty permitted be abused.

The American people know how the mothers of President Garfield and President McKinley were asked to be present when their sons were inaugurated—a tribute of love and devotion on the part of these noble sons, who appreciated the part their mothers had in their success. All are familiar with the saying of the martyr President Abraham Lincoln: "All I am I owe to my angel mother. Thank God for the opportunities for women, and thank God more for the noble uses made of their opportunities. May not the words of the wise man aptly apply: $10

THE WILD ANIMAL MARKET.

Giraffes and Hippopotami Bring the Highest Prices.

Wild animals from the Gizeh Zoological Gardens in Egypt delivered during the years 1896-1903 at London, Marseilles, Hamburg and Rotterdam realized the following prices:

The "king of beasts," the lion, sold comparatively cheap, mainly because the cost of feeding made buyers shy of the investment. Fine wild born lions realized from $300 to $500.

Menagerie born animals cost on an average $50. A lioness has even sold for under $20; while, on the other hand, $1,200 to $1,400 is not too big a price to ask for an exceptionally fine specimen of lion.

Pumas—occasionally described as lions—are not in such demand; $25 will often buy one; fair average specimens fetch $90, $100 and a few $120. The tiger is, however, a high priced animal; $500 is the lowest figure at which he sells, with $400 for the tigress.

A specialty of value is the European lynx. A young one cannot be had for less than $100, and the full grown animal is worth from $120 to $170. Wolves are a weak market:

CLEANSING HINTS OF MANY SORTS

WITH the fall cleaning over, the ambitious housewife is very apt to find in the attic or storeroom a number of articles which were thrust aside on strenuous days to be cleaned later, a pair of gloves worth saving, a rug badly stained but not beyond redemption, or a picture frame that needs touching up.

For all these material ailments and defects, patent cleansers, paints or stains are sold, and if directions are followed, results are generally sure and satisfactory. But the average woman thinks that every detail in the somewhat involved directions may not be important and so the remedy fails and she blames the maker.

For instance, with one of the best up-to-date cleansing fluids come directions to place the fabric to be cleaned on blotting paper or many folds of soft old cloth. The woman who does this will find that the pattern of the article cleaned will be reproduced in discolored lines on the blotting pattern, the fluid eating the grease and dust right out. If the blotting paper is not used, the fluid will form a ring in the fabric almost as unsightly as the original dirt.

Again, if you are using a patent varnish or stain, and instructions bid you first sandpaper the woodwork, use sandpaper vigorously. The patented article cannot perform miracles.

Perhaps you have some veils to wash and clean. For net veils, use gasoline. Put the veil in a glass jar with wide mouth, cover with gasoline, shake vigorously, rinse with clear gasoline, shake in the open air and pin out straight to dry on a clean cloth or sheet. Wash chicken veils in tepid suds made with pure white soap, rinse in water of the same temperature, and stretch on sheet or cloth to dry.

Never put away a delicately tinted gown, wrap or accessory without removing all spots and stains. For ordinary dust or grime use French chalk or magnesia, allowing it to remain on the fabric until ready to wear the article again; then brush off with clean soft brush.

If you have used gasoline to clean any fabric and find that it leaves a ring, hold the cloth over a steaming kettle and the ring may disappear.

When lace doyleys become soiled, do not put them in the wash, but lay in a box, thick with French chalk. If this is done before the dust turns to grime, washing can be delayed indefinitely. The secret of cleaning is not to let things get really dirty, but to take the proverbial stitch in time.

Blood or meat stains on linen may be removed by first soaking the article in cold water; then make a suds with cold water and rinse in cold water. Hot water at any stage of the process will set the stain.

Stains on mattresses can be removed by covering them with a paste made from full's earth, water and ammonia. To each teaspoon of the creamy paste made from the earth and tepid water, add one teaspoon of aqua ammonia.

For ice cream stains, especially on silk, try chloroform. Several applications may be necessary and be sure to use blotting paper beneath the stain.

To remove paint stains when fresh, use turpentine or alcohol, spreading the fabric over many thicknesses of clean cloth. For old paint stains, try chloroform.

Timely Hints for Busy Shoppers

THE most striking trimmings for messaline and other satin gowns are bands and galloons of gold set embroidered in colors—all the fashionable shades to match dress fabrics. These are finished with cords and tassels or fringe in gold.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
NOV. 8.

Lesson VI. David Grieves for Absalom. Golden Text, Prov. 17. 25.

Verse 1. David numbered the people—Mustered his men, forming an army into line of battle. Some years seem to have elapsed since David had engaged in actual warfare, so that the sudden emergency which had come upon him necessitated a hasty reorganization of such forces as he could gather on short notice.

2. Sent forth the people—Perhaps better, "Divided the people," that is, into three companies.

Joab—The famous leader of David's armies in previous wars and a nephew of the king.

Ittai the Gittite—See note in Word Studies for November 1.

5. Deal gently for my sake with the young man—We note how throughout this eventful day in which the gravest interests of the kingdom were at stake the father's love outweighs the monarch's judgment.

All the people heard—The charge concerning Absalom was given to the generals in the presence of the entire army.

7. The forest of Ephraim—An unknown forest or jungle region located, not in Ephraim proper, but east of the Jordan in some part of the denser forest of Gilead.

8. The forest devoured more people—The nature of the ground made the escape of the fugitives next to impossible so that more were slain in the pursuit through the forest than had fallen in the actual battle. Thus Absalom himself met his fate.

9. His head caught hold of the oak—Perhaps better, "was caught fast in the oak," that is, as he rode at full speed, perhaps at the same time looking backward at his pursuers, his head was caught in the fork of an overhanging bough of a tree.

11. Ten pieces of silver—Ten shekels, the value of which at this time is unknown.

12. Not put forth my hand against the king's son.—The reply of this private in the ranks to his commanding officer indicates the deep reverence with which the common people, at least, regarded the king and the profound respect which they had for his word of command.

14. Darts—Hebrew, staves, that is, short spears.

15. Ten young men slew him—The execution in which Joab himself took an active part was most brutal, as the details of our narrative at this point clearly bring out.

16. Held back—Or, "spared." 17. Raised over him a very great heap of stones—The customary mark of detestation. Thus was Achan treated in the time of Joshua (compare Josh. 7. 26).

18. The pillar, which is in the king's dale—Absalom not having a son sought to perpetuate his name by means of this memorial pillar. The dale, or valley, referred to is mentioned only here and in Gen. 14. 17. Its location is unknown.

19. Ahimaaz the son of Zadok—Already known to us from the longer narrative of our last lesson (2 be slipped slowly, not gulped down in haste.

As to food at table, thick soups or puddings are better than clear soups or consommé as fat-producers, all starchy foods, cereals, potatoes, beans, peas, rice, macaroni, etc., are fat-builders, while pickles and tart fruits such as lemons and oranges are to be avoided.

If the appetite is capricious and light, try outdoor exercise, walking within moderation, playing outdoor games like tennis or golf. I have a very good formula for a tonic and appetizer which is entirely harmless and which I will furnish upon receipt of a self-addressed and stamped envelope, but healthy thoughts and outdoor exercise are the best of appetizers.

The thin, haggard woman should learn to take a nap every afternoon, and, if possible, to get in at least eight hours sleep every night.

Physical culture exercises she can use with discretion, but not violently. Most especially should she select exercises which will round out the arms and bust and fill out the sunken chest. For the flat and shapeless bust, there comes an excellent remedy to be taken internally, formula for which will be sent in response to a stamped and addressed envelope.

For the sunken chest, the simplest exercises are the best. Stand erect with the heels together, the toes out and the hands on the hips, the thumbs pointing forward. Keep the abdomen in, the chest high, the head erect but not thrown back. Now on eight counts swing the elbows backward, holding the finger tips tight on the hips but the thumbs may spring away from the body. Repeat eight counts, and repeat the exercise, continuing the exercise regularly and persistently until the elbows touch. Never exercise more than five minutes, however, the first day, increasing the time as strength comes with regular work.

Another exercise which will fill out hollows in both chest and throat is this—Take the position described above, save that the arms are stretched out in front of the body, on a level with the shoulders and the width of the chest apart, fingers together and palms down.

On eight counts swing the right arm back as far as you can without straining, and always on a level with the shoulder. On the next eight counts, swing the left arm back, then alternate the right and left on eight counts, and finally both arms on eight counts, making thirty-two counts in all. This movement is not unlike that of swimming, which, by the way, is an excellent exercise for thin women.

For the hollows in your throat, try swinging the head from side to side on eight counts, then back and forth on eight counts and finally describe a circle with the head. When perspiration is started by this exercise, massage the throat with the following cream—

Tannin.....1/2 grain gramme
Lanoline.....30 grains gramme
Oil of sweet almonds.....20 grammes

This must be mixed in a double boiler over hot, not boiling water. Melt the oils together and as they are cooling, beat in the tannin. Do not use this on the face, as it is a cream which induces a growth of hair.

MODIFIED SHEATH SKIRT

These are finished with cords and tassels or fringe in gold.

Bobbinet is a good investment. It makes very good deep ruching for neck and sleeves, but it should be double and pleated with the aid of a knife pleater. All soft nets are suitable for these new ruchings which can be made at home.

For a tailored hat of large size a popular trimming is the Pocahontas feather, fashioned precisely like an Indian head-dress, stiff feathers turned upward around the crown, breast feathers over the brim and long quills or wings falling backward on the left side.

It requires a yard and a half of net veiling to fasten around the new large hats. They are fitted very smoothly around the rim of the hat, then around the chin of the wearer, and held against the hair at the nape of the neck with a wide barrette.

At all the ribbon and belt counters you will find the new Directoire belts. They are strips of soft silk, laid in tufts, running lengthwise, and finished with knots of the silk, and matching balls or tassels.

For evening wear the newest scarf is of Spanish lace dyed in the most delicate tints of pink, blue, lavender, etc. They cost from $18.00 up.

The enormous rhinestone hatpin is worn exclusively with large black hats this winter.

The new cravats are like ribbon chains that come to the waist line or even lower. They vary in width from an inch to two inches, and are made of velvet ribbon or messaline, sometimes knotted in several places, and always finished with an ornament of some sort. The latter may be a tassel, a ball or a jewel. Ties of coral pink velvet ribbon will be finished with odd ornaments of dull gold set with imitation corals—violet ribbons with amethyst ornaments.

For the early part of the season, many of the dress hats are trimmed with flowers instead of feathers. Dahlias in rich colorings are very popular and often they are clouded with smoky brown maline.

You can get a ready-made vest in Persian or embroidered silk or brocade to wear with any of the new colorings. These are used with the Louis coats.

"MARY DEAN."

$10 is their average per head, $4 the minimum and $20 the top price. Catch a fox quite young and the cub may realize $4, $2 or only just $1; full grown its value is $10.

Polar bears always maintain their price. Very rarely does a specimen change hands at less than $120; but other kinds of bear come cheaper. A sea lion costs $100. The beaver is good for $60, a price due to the animal's destruction for bounty in the Rhone Valley.

Hippotami have no quotation in some markets. When in supply this prehistoric looking beast is worth from $2,400 to $3,000. A young one may be purchased for from $1,000 to $1,600.

But most considered of wild animals is the giraffe. Previous to 1895 it was impossible to buy one for less than $5,000; in 1903-04 the price had shrunk to $1,600, which did not repay the cost of importation. The actual market value of a young giraffe in good condition may now be quoted at anywhere from $2,000 to $2,400.

As to the monkey market, the chimpanzee varies a good deal in price, a young one in condition fetching from $200 to $400. Other big apes are more expensive, although at times there goes begging a good chance, as in the Suez market, where a young orang-outang almost full grown was on offer at $30, recently—a real bargain.

Barbary apes, of the kind which still inhabit Gibraltar rock, sell at $10 to $30. Bombay and Southwest China monkeys are not held of much account. Four dollars will buy one. Baboons cost more—generally from $10 to $100, according to the specimen.

BATS AS PETS.

A College Professor Has Had Several and Likes Them.

A bat in a woman's bedroom can cause more excitement than can one lone burglar or even a dozen mice.

All of which is sheer foolishness, according to a writer—a male writer, it is unnecessary to say—in the Technical World. If she would but give the bat a chance he could prove to her entire satisfaction that he is an intelligent and amiable creature and not unworthy of a permanent place in the household.

Yes, the detested bat makes a most agreeable household pet. He is a most affectionate creature and will attach himself to a person as does a kindly and intelligent dog. A college professor says:

"When I was a student at the university I had two bats, which came and went freely of their own accord. In the evening they were wont to rush through the window into the neighboring garden, hunt insects, and when their hunger was appeased they would return to my room."

"They slept on a bookshelf, where they suspended themselves from a dictionary. At the present time I possess a bat that shows a touching attachment to my person and follows me about through the room of my house if I call it."

This advocate of bats as pets further states that when he talks pleasantly to it his present favorite raises and lowers its ears, much after the manner of a horse, blinks its eyes in a contented fashion, licks its nozzle with its tongue, and in general disports itself in a manner that indicates it is pleased and contented. When harshly spoken to it lays back its ears, shrinks away and tries to escape by climbing up the curtain.

"When I sit by lamplight in the morning working at my desk I can hardly get rid of it," he writes. "It comes and goes, rambling about the desk or climbing up my legs or else it sits on the curtain and endeavors by violent shakings of the head and shrill twittering to excite my attention and to obtain worms—its usual food—thereby. Its appetite is indeed something uncanny. Thirty fat worms are readily taken at one meal."

pillar. The date, or valley, referred to is mentioned only here and in Gen. 14. 17. Its location is unknown.

19. Ahimaaz the son of Zadok—Already known to us from the longer narrative of our last lesson (2 Sam. 15. 27).

20. Thou shalt not be the bearer of tidings this day—Joab refuses to expose the priest's son to the danger involved in bearing tidings which may be unwelcome to the king (compare 2 Sam. 4. 10).

21. The Cushite—Or Ethiopian. Perhaps a black slave whose life Joab is more willing to risk than that of the priest's son.

23. By the way of the plain—Avoiding the more direct but also more difficult route taken by the Ethiopian in order to gain the advantage of traveling the well-beaten highway which formed the customary route from the Jordan to Mahanaim.

24. Between the two gates—By extensions outward and inward from the city wall an inner and an outer gate were provided. Between these the king waited for tidings from the field of battle.

26. The watchman called—From the tower above the gate below which the king was sitting.

27. He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings—David rightly reasons that Joab would not choose so distinguished a messenger to bear evil tidings.

29. I saw a great tumult, but I knew not what it was—The messenger's answer was perhaps prompted by a desire to in a measure prepare the king for the evil tidings which he knew the Cushite would shortly bring, lest the sudden breaking of the bad news concerning Absalom should overwhelm the aged king. This, however, does not excuse the falsehood of which Ahimaaz was guilty and which reflects not so much the wickedness of the young man's heart as it does the slight regard which everybody in his time seems to have had for literal accuracy of statement. It also reflects the still dominant human instinct to hide unwelcome truth from those we love at any cost.

32. The enemies of my lord the king... he as that young man is—It was not necessary to speak more plainly. The king fully understood the import of the words.

33. Much moved—Or, "sore troubled."

The chamber over the gate—In the tower surmounting the city wall at this point.

Following the events narrated in our lesson passage, Joab, on learning of David's bitter lament over the death of his son, is prompted by his soldier's indignation to rebuke his sovereign for his apparent disregard for the best interests of his kingdom. Returning to Jerusalem, David succeeds in establishing his kingdom, more firmly than ever, so that at the time of Solomon's succession to the throne (compare Lesson for November 22) the strength and glory of the united kingdom is almost at its maximum.

MISSING OPPORTUNITIES.

"I have no patience with a man who makes the same mistake twice," said Armes, rather severely, in speaking of an unfortunate friend.

"Neither have I," agreed his wife, "when there are so many other mistakes to make."

HAYS SAYS THREE YEARS

Time of the Completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

A despatch from Montreal says: In an interview on Friday night, Mr. Chas. M. Hays, who has just returned from a trip over the G. T. P., said that he did not expect any conditions would arise to prevent the G. T. P. being finished by December, 1911. He stated that trains would be running from Port Arthur to Edmonton next spring. Another hundred miles will shortly be given out east of the present 110 miles on the coast section and 200 miles more west of Wolf Creek, leaving only 400 miles of a gap yet to be contracted for.

Speaking of Prince Rupert, Mr. Hays said he had just arranged with the British Columbia Government to spend $200,000 at that place. Mr. Hays denied any possible friction between the Grand Trunk and the G. T. P. He said the Grand Trunk could not back out of their agreement with the G.T.P. and would not if they could. Speaking of branch lines, he said the G.T.P. would be built to both Vancouver in the west and to Montreal in the east, as it was impossible to ignore them in any scheme of railroad building.

YOUNG FOLKS

LION'S WAY.

"Oh, look at the big dog!" cried Rob.

"Stay on the piazza!" his mother commanded. "He might bite you."

"He doesn't look much like a bitey dog," said Rob. And as his mother watched the steadily trotting animal, with the broad head and the heavy rolls of muscle about chest and neck, she was forced to agree with Rob. He did not look like a "bitey" dog; he looked like a dog which had business to mind and minded it.

The Lamsons' summer-house was just next a point where the tide ran very strong. Half a mile out was the Middle Ground, a huge bar within three feet of the surface at low tide. Behind them, on a bluff, was a small lighthouse—the Middle Ground Light. The big dog belonged to the lighthouse-keeper, and so Rob saw him often. At first the boy meant the dog no harm. But Rob was used to the pitiful stray city dogs, and had seen other boys drive them away. He had never had a dog of his own. And there was something dignified and indifferent about this big animal that the boy resented. Once he tossed sticks into the water, commanding, "Fetch! Fetch!" but the dog paid no attention. "Stupid!" said Rob, and flung a small pebble at him, which hit him in the ribs. The animal shook himself, looked at Rob solemnly, and at a stately march moved away up the beach. Rob was never a cruel boy, but he had not learned how to be kind to animals.

One morning, when Rob was playing on the pier, throwing in sticks and watching them chase each other swiftly out to sea, he threw one too hard, lost his balance and went over. Fortunately he was barefooted, and he could swim a little. He kept his head above water and shouted for help, but no one seemed to hear him, and the tide was sweeping him out fast. Then suddenly, like a whirlwind, down the dog from the lighthouse to the dog. Plunging in with a whine, he swam and was whirled down toward Rob, seized the boy's shirt in his big jaws, and turning, plowed down land again. They were carried down too, turned away up the hill. So the small boy had to walk down the hill again, with his lips very shaky; and the lesson firmly in his memory that sometimes, even when one is very sorry for doing wrong, he cannot make others believe it—not right away.—Youth's Companion.

MUST LEARN RULES.

Railway Trainmen to be Examined Every Three Months.

A despatch from Toronto says: The managers of the Canadian railways have issued a special order to their train employees regarding the rules for running trains. "For some time past," said an official, "there have been many accidents which have been attributed to the neglect of trainmen. When these men are brought up for investigation by a superintendent they invariably plead that they have not time to study the rules. They will have this excuse no longer, because we intend that they shall be examined every three months while in the company's service. We will give every man a fair chance to become familiar with the laws and if they fail to pass the examination they will be dismissed."

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGED.

Fourteen-year-old Boy Shot a Companion Accidentally.

A despatch from Fredericton, N. B., says: A fourteen-year-old boy named Chester Urquhart of Covered Bridge, parish of Stanley, is in jail here, charged with causing the death of another boy named Geo. Clary at that place on Oct. 16. The two boys were out shooting together and the rifle which Urquhart was carrying was discharged, the bullet striking Clary in the neck, inflicting a wound, from the effects of which he died in twenty minutes. Coroner Wainwright of Stanley held an inquest, and the jury after hearing the evidence declared that Clary's death was due to culpable negligence in the part of Urquhart. Urquhart claims that the shooting was accidental.

LAD SHOT BY COMPANION.

The Latter Tripped and Rifle was Discharged.

A despatch from Guelph says: An accident occurred at 3.30 on Friday afternoon, a short distance from the city, which resulted in the

HARD AND SOFT WATER.

One sometimes hears the assertion that a hard water, although not especially pleasant for washing purposes, is fine for drinking, and possessed of health-giving properties of the highest order. If one keeps his ears open he can hear almost anything in the course of time. This is one of the things he can hear. As a matter of fact, the softer the water, that is, the more nearly pure it is, the better it is for all purposes.

Hard waters are those that contain a considerable amount of lime or magnesium salts, or sometimes iron, in solution. The permanently hard waters are those that cannot be softened by boiling; they usually contain sulphate of lime. The temporarily hard waters, on the other hand, are those that contain bicarbonate of lime. When such water is boiled, some of the carbonic acid is thrown off, and the insoluble carbonate of lime or chalk is formed; this falls to the bottom of the vessel, leaving the water soft.

Hard water, when it is not praised as healthful, is sometimes accused of being the cause of kidney colic, or of stone in the bladder, and it has also been asserted that its use results in a premature hardening of the arteries. It probably does not do this, but it may cause dyspeptic troubles.

A permanently hard water is bad for cooking, as peas and other vegetables will not soften in it properly, and more tea or coffee is required to make an infusion of palatable strength when the water is hard. A hard water is also wasteful of soap. Every degree of hardness, which means the equivalent of one grain of bicarbonate of lime to the gallon, requires from eight to ten grains of soap to neutralize it before a lather can be made.

A limestone water can be softened for washing and cooking purposes by the addition of a little carbonate—not bicarbonate—of soda, but for drinking it is better to boil the water and then, after giving it time to settle, decant it. The boiled water can be aerated and so made palatable, by half-filling a clean bottle with the water and then shaking it vigorously. — Youth's Companion.

HEALTH NOTES.

Never go from a warm atmosphere in to a cooler one without keeping the mouth closed, so that the air may be warmed in its passage through the nose before it reaches the lungs.

To Take Castor Oil.—Take an orange and squeeze about half the juice in a glass, put in your castor oil on this, squeeze the remainder of the juice on top, but do not stir, and swallow and you will not taste the oil.

Heartshorn Liniment.—Take one-quarter ammonia, one-quarter turpentine, one-quarter camphor, one-quarter goose oil and mix. This simple home-made liniment is especially good for neuralgia and other aches, pains, and soreness.

Medicine-cabinets should be in every household. They should contain the usual simple remedies, such as linseed-meal, mustard-leaves, vaseline, cascara tabloids, olive and castor oil, sticking-plaster, a roll of new flannel, rolls of nouted for help, but no one seemed to hear him, and the tide was sweeping him out fast. Then suddenly, like a whirlwind, down the dog came from the lighthouse tower the dog. Plunging in with a whine, he swam and was whirled down toward Rob, seized the boy's shirt in his big jaws, and turning, plowed to land again. They were carried down fully two hundred yards before they reached shore, but they reached it. Rob, half-drowned, was frightened almost out of his senses; nevertheless, as soon as he had staggered to his feet, he attempted to pat the dog, who was nuzzling him.

"Good dog! good dog!" he whimpered. But as he spoke, the animal growled a little in his throat and moved away. As Rob went nearer again, the dog shook himself till the water flew from his coat, and then he trotted away without a glance behind. Rob followed along, and climbed the hill to the lighthouse. The dog was lying in the sun at the door. As Rob approached, he got up and stood facing the boy, and growled. Something new in his look daunted Rob, who stopped and called out to the keeper. When the keeper appeared, Rob told his story. The keeper nodded.

"I've seen you once or twice bethering Lion," he said. "Now he's saved your life. You are not the first boy. And he won't make friends! Well, if he was human, maybe he'd be ready to 'forgive and forget,' as the song says. But anyway, he's only a dog, you see, even if he has got feelings. So you can't argue with him." The keeper eyed Rob keenly. "Come here, Lion," he went on, and the big dog advanced. "This boy is sorry for what he did, and he wants to make up. How about it, old fellow?"

Rob looked anxiously at the dog, feeling very much ashamed. But Lion, pawing uneasily at his master, gave one more glance at the boy, and deliberately turned his back.

"You see," said the keeper, slowly, "being only a dog, he don't trust you yet. You try minding your own business as far as he's concerned for the rest of the time, and maybe he'll come round. But he isn't ready yet." At this he

LAD SHOT BY COMPANION.

The Latter Tripped and Rifle was Discharged.

A despatch from Guelph says: An accident occurred at 3.30 on Friday afternoon, a short distance from the city, which resulted in the almost instant death of James Conolly, aged 18, an employee of Taylor-Forbes Co. The young man, with two younger companions, were out for an afternoon's shooting and when near Trainor's Cut, the scene of several railroad accidents, they decided to take a short cut. Conolly went up the embankment and sat down, and one of the boys, named Scarlett, went towards him, but in doing so tripped. In falling the rifle was discharged and the 22-bullet lodged in Conolly's head, going in just over the right eye. One of the boys ran for help to a nearby farmer, but before anyone else could reach him Conolly was dead. Conolly's parents recently retired from farming to live in Guelph.

ASSAULTED A TEACHER.

Mr. Johnston, of Guelph, Struck by Pupil's Brother.

A despatch from Guelph says: As the result of a note regarding the attendance of his daughter, Dan Thompson and his son, William, on Thursday afternoon went to St. George's ward school and after the teacher, Mr. Johnston, had been summoned from the room, a scuffle commenced and the master was struck heavily in the face by young Thompson. An attack upon a teacher in this way is a serious offence and Thompson will have to face the Magistrate.

Mrs. Miller of West London had her thumb so injured while leading a calf by a rope, the animal running away, that she had to have the member amputated.

THREE MEN WERE RUN DOWN

Passing Freight Train Prevented Them Hearing Electric Car Coming Behind.

A despatch from Windsor says: Three lives were blotted out in an instant when one of the big suburban cars on the W. E. & L. S. Electric Railway ran down three men walking on the tracks near Pelton station shortly before midnight on Friday. The dead are: Walter Gilhula, James Battersby and Francis Battersby. The night was dark and the noise of an approaching car was drowned out by the heavy freight train passing on the Michigan Central tracks close by.

The three men had been attending a Halloween dance given by William C. Donaldson. James Battersby was keeper of a tower at the point where the Pere Marquette Railroad tracks and the Michigan Central intersect, and was trying to reach his tower in time to let down the gates for an approaching train, the rumble of which drowned the noise of the electric train coming behind the men, and without knowing that the car was bearing down on them the two Battersbys and Gilhula were struck.

The motorman discerned the men ahead for about forty yards before they were struck. He rang his gong and sounded the pneumatic whistle in the usual manner, but the signals apparently were unheard and in a moment the swiftly moving car had overtaken the little party and ground out their lives beneath the wheels. The head of Gilhula was severed from the body. No blame is attached to the crew of the suburban car. The three victims of the accident were all well-known young men residing in Sandwich West. The Battersby boys were cousins. All were unmarried.

TELL FROM BRIDGE.

Terrible Fate of Herbert Knight, a Brantford Youth.

A despatch from Brantford says: Herbert Knight, aged fifteen, son of John Knight, Eagle avenue, was killed on Wednesday morning by falling from a T. H. & B. Railway bridge over the Grand River. The youth was proceeding to the Brantford Screw Works, where he was employed, and in going over the bridge accidentally tripped over the rail in stepping to one side and fell over the structure. He struck on the stone abutment ten feet below, and then fell to the river twenty-five feet lower. The water was very shallow, and he was dashed to death on the rock bottom, his skull being fractured and neck broken. There will be no inquest.

GIRL'S PITIFUL DEATH.

Afraid of Being Sent Away, She Goes to the Fields to Die.

A despatch from Belleville says: A girl named Edith Nicholls, who had been brought to this country by a girls' home, has been living near Madoc with a farmer named Willard Rupert and his family. The family told the girl they were going to send her back to the home, and she became despondent. She left the house and was not seen again till, a few days later, her dead body was found in one of the fields. The jury brought in a verdict of death from exposure. No blame was attached to anybody.

simple home-made liniment is especially good for neuralgia and other aches, pains, and soreness.

Medicine-cabinets should be in every household. They should contain the usual simple remedies, such as linseed-meal, mustard-leaves, vaseline, cascara tabloids, olive and castor oil, sticking-plaster, a roll of new flannel, rolls of old linen for bandages and poultices, needle and thread, scissors, and a clinical thermometer. With such things at hand, much time and anxiety may be saved.

A mustard plaster should not be a heavy wet mass; it should be light. To prepare one which never will blister proceed as follows: In a bowl put three heaping tablespoonsful of mustard, stir well, next three tablespoonsful of flour, then add sufficient lard to form a paste; spread this on old muslin, and never use new muslin for poultices, plasters, or any medical purpose; cover the mixture with two thicknesses of muslin, and apply to the afflicted part. If a plaster feels cold heat it by letting it lie on a hot plate a few minutes before applying it.

HON. MR. GREENWAY DEAD.

Appointed to Railway Commission Six Weeks Ago.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Hon. Thomas Greenway, ex-Premier of Manitoba, and member for Lisgar in the last House, died on Friday morning at the Windsor Hotel here. Hon. Mr. Greenway six weeks ago was appointed a railway commissioner for Canada. He arrived at Ottawa on Oct. 9, but never sat on the board, a severe attack of asthma confining him to his room since then. Asthma and heart trouble led to his final collapse on Friday morning. His remains were sent West for interment in Crystal City, Manitoba.

IMMIGRANTS DEPORTED.

Government Careful About Admitting People Now.

A despatch from Ottawa says: During the first nine months of this year the immigration department has deported 1,011 immigrants as being undesirable citizens. During the same period 1,266 people have been refused entry from the United States. These figures indicate the close supervision now being exercised by the department over the new arrivals in the country, and it is said that no country has ever received a better class of immigrants than the 120,000 who settled in Canada this year. Immigration for the year has now practically stopped.

ONEIDA FARMER'S LOSS.

Mr. Patrick Fagan's Barns Burned in Oneida.

A despatch from Cayuga says: The barns and outbuildings of Patrick Fagan, a farmer in the township of Oneida, were destroyed by fire on Wednesday morning. Everything was lost, but no horses or cattle had been stabled. The fire is supposed to be of incendiary origin, and a warrant has been issued for the arrest of Bruce Lonsdale, who has been recently employed by Mr. Fagan, but it is said they had some quarrel and Lonsdale left. It is said that he has been recently seen in the neighborhood. Lonsdale is a young man, 23 years of age, one eye gone, height about 5 feet 7 inches and one low shoulder.

WARRANTS FOR VOLUNTEERS.

Land Certificates and Cash Bounties are Being Issued.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Interior Department is now rapidly issuing warrants for land grants to South African veterans as applications come in. On Wednesday morning 250 warrants were made out, and so far over 600 of the veterans have applied for, and received their warrants. As yet no one has applied for scrip, instead of land. As soon as the department receives application for either land or scrip a warrant is issued. For information of the veterans entitled to receive grants under the bounty act, it may be stated that application must first go to the Militia Department. A certificate is then issued by that department, and the Interior Department is notified that the volunteer is entitled to the bounty. The latter department then, on notification from the volunteer as to whether scrip or land is desired, issues a warrant for the land or pays over $160 in cash scrip, as the applicant desires. In making application for land the location must, of course, be stated.

EXHALING DEADLY FUMES.

Mexico's Oil Gusher Continues to Give Trouble.

A despatch from New Orleans, La., says: Deadly fumes from Mexico's great oil well fire, sixty miles from Tampico, have killed more than a score of workmen during the past few days, completely blackened the white paint on the sides of the ships, endangered commerce, and caused thousands of dollars' worth of damage to ranches and other neighboring interests, according to Captain Michael Henrichsen, of the steamship City of Mexico, which reached New Orleans Monday night. Battling to save what they could from the wreckage, American mine-owners, after spending more than a million dollars, finally succeeded in extinguishing the blaze, but even greater terrors than before prevailed then. The flames had consumed the noxious gases, but when the fire was stopped the gases burst forth. Laborers, inhaling a bit of the stuff, dropped in their tracks dead.

CAST AWAY IN SOUTH SEA.

Tale of Hardship Brought to San Francisco.

A despatch from San Francisco, Cal., says: A story of hardships as castaways in the South Seas is told by seven Chinese who arrived on the steamer Manchurian on Wednesday from Hong Kong. They formed the crew of the barkentine Foster, which was wrecked on a reef 700 miles from Freemantle, Australia. For 75 days they labored to repair the little vessel so that it might again put to sea, subsisting on a scant amount of ship's stores and fish and roots found on the almost barren island. The repairs were completed on May 26 last, and Captain Robinson of the barkentine proposed to sail for South Africa. At this the crew mutinied, and for punishment they were left for seven days on the island, while the captain stood off with the vessel. Then they were taken aboard in irons, but later released and taken to Cocos Island, where fresh water and supplies were obtained, and from this place they eventually made their way to Hong Kong.

ITALIAN MURDERS FRIEND

The Men Had Been Playing a Game in Railway Yards.

A despatch from Ingersoll, Ont., says: A quarrel between two Italian navvies in the employ of the C. P. R. led to murder on Sunday afternoon. During the excitement which followed the crime the murderer made his escape. The tragedy occurred shortly after four o'clock, in the C. P. R. yards, where a number of Italians had assembled, and were amusing themselves by playing some game, similar to "duck on the rock," for money. The victim of the tragedy is Pardy Constantine, a married man, 28 years old, who had intended leaving in the course of a week to join his family in Italy. It is alleged that M. Ponzi was his assailant, and Ponzi's flight is taken as evidence of his guilt.

The other Italians have shown little or no disposition to aid the police, the bulk of the information obtained coming from a twin brother of the murdered man, and three local boys who witnessed the killing. Constantine was struck over the left temple with a huge stone, and he dropped in his tracks, dying before a doctor arrived. As soon as Constantine fell Ponzi rushed to the car he had been occupying, snatched his coat, and made his escape. Ponzi is described as being 28 or 30 years of age, 5 feet 11 inches in height, and wearing a dark brown or black coat, blue overalls, faded, and a soft felt hat.

Fashion Hints.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Roses for hats are immense in size.

New coats are elaborately braided.

Modish grays range from deepest smoke to palest pearl.

The Psyche knot is the favorite coiffure of the moment.

The sack shape is smart and becoming to good forms.

The walking coat is long and the walking skirt is short.

Rich and dark colors have the greatest vogue in hat trimming.

Some smart French women are beginning to carry dainty walking sticks.

Filet net and soutache braid are the two most popular trimmings.

Ribbon ornaments of all sorts will be used on fall and winter millinery.

The empire style is steadily failing before the triumphant directoire vogue.

Most of the new directoire sashes are trimmed with buttons both front and back.

Black and white blends form some of the smart effects in hat feathers.

The season's gowns, suits, and hats demand a great amount of hand needle work.

The cash is worn with all sorts of frocks, from the street suit to the ball gown.

Short gloves — the two button kind — are essential with the long sleeves of the fall costumes.

Large pockets are a feature of the new separate coat and are set far down on the body.

Some of the new fur coats are finished with flaring reverses of velvet and some of contrasting fur.

Touches of lingerie are found added to waists of silk in ruffles and collar with good effect.

A new detail of the rich seal skin coat is a standing collar made of ends that cross over each other in the form of a cravat.

A good many of the colored hats have black velvet facings, although

All the latest coats are completely directoire, although they are liberal adaptations of the vogue of the late eighteenth century.

Newest veillings include the hexagonal mesh and the square velvet dot in brown, black, and combinations of brown and tan and magpie.

Coiffures are increasing in size. The most fashionable arrangement, next to the Psyche knot, is flat, wide, and huge at the back.

The sealskin coat, veteran of many a season, was never more fashionable than this autumn — possibly because the price of real seal is just now almost prohibitive.

Some of the big black hats of the season show the wide brims rolled off the face in front and on one side and caught back with two or three ostrich tips.

Though never obtrusively fashionable, the grays are the choice of many really well dressed women, particularly for evening dresses that are to be worn often.

A GERMAN COLONY.

Party From Dakota Buy Thirty-five Sections Near Calgary.

A despatch from Calgary, Alta., says: A party of German settlers from Dakota, numbering in all 173 souls, have purchased an area covering thirty-five sections of land north of here. They have brought everything with them necessary to found a flourishing colony, even to their own minister. Their effects include nearly twelve hundred head of stock. The body is regarded as one of the model colonies.

BRITONS DRINK MORE.

Unemployed in Britain and in America Compared.

A despatch from London says: John Burns, the Labor leader and President of the Local Government Board, drew down upon his head the anathemas of the Laborites when in the House of Commons on Thursday afternoon he intimated that the main disadvantage under which the British unemployed labored as compared to the unemployed in America was that the Britons drank more than their transatlantic confreres.

Mr. Burns repudiated the suggestion that the difference lay in the fact that the American unemployed had money in their pockets.

"I have been in America three times," he said, "and the only difference I saw between the unemployed in America and those of this country was that the former for a short time after losing work were better dressed. Many of them do not drink so much as do many British unemployed workmen, but British workmen have an advantage in the number of days they are idle."

Loud cries of "It is untrue; it is a shameful comparison," greeted Mr. Burns' statement.

GETS BACK HIS SEVERED LEG.

"Thanks," Says Day When Limb Cut off by Waggon is Returned.

A despatch from New York says: A milk waggon ran over John Day, a watchman of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, at Broadway and Kosciusko street, Brooklyn, on Tuesday. Spectators screamed as Day staggered to his feet. They saw that one of his trousers' legs flapped empty in the air, torn and dusty. Day leaned against a post, breathing hard, but without wincing.

"His leg's cut off! Where's his leg?" cried a man in the crowd. A small boy, wearing spectacles, ran up.

"Here it is!" he exclaimed. The boy held the leg in his arms.

"Thanks," said Day, taking the leg.

"I'm glad it didn't get caught in the spokes. Sometimes it's better to have a wooden leg than a real one."

The driver of the vehicle was arrested.

BIG FARM ENTERPRISE.

Company to Take Up Half a Million Acres of Land.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: A remarkable project which seems incredible of realization was outlined on Thursday by A. B. Exley, who styles himself "General Manager of the Anglo-Canadian Land, Grain and Stock Company," which was recently incorporated at St. Pierre, South Dakota, with a capitalization of two and a half millions and with the avowed intension of colonizing five hundred thousand acres of land in the Canadian Northwest and working it entirely with English labor, as a single enterprise. The company hopes to establish itself in the neighborhood of Vermilion.

MAIL BAGS AND DRIVER GONE.

Mysterious Disappearance in Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mail bags containing some $1,500 have disappeared. Driver Lecavallier is also missing. He was employed by W. Heelan, the mail contractor, driving a mail wagon from the post-office to the railway stations. On Friday night he was at work as usual, but he has disappeared. The mail wagon was found at a street corner.

102 ACCIDENTS FATAL.

154 Work People Seriously Injured During September.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Industrial accidents occurring to 256 individual work people in Canada during the month of September, 1908, were reported to the Department of Labor. Of these 102 were fatal, and 154 resulted in serious injuries. In addition, two fatal accidents were reported as having taken place prior to the beginning of the month, information not having been received by the department before September, 1908, was 12 less than in the previous month, and 6 more than in October, 1907.

Mrs. William Astor died at New York on Friday.

AUSTRIA WILL NOT FIGHT

Tells Serbia and Montenegro They Must Give Up Cherished Dreams

A despatch from Budapest says: Baron von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, in an important speech on Tuesday, indicated a yielding attitude on the part of Austria, which may aid materially in the preservation of peace.

Addressing the Austrian delegation, the Foreign Minister admitted that it was Austria's desire to do its utmost to relieve the present tension, and that therefore the Government would not insist that the question of the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina should be entirely eliminated from the programme of the International Congress, although naturally he could not admit that the powers had the right to question the annexation of the Provinces, or the idea of any territorial compensations in other directions.

On this basis, however, he added, there was no objection to the Congress placing on record the abrogation of the articles relating to Bosnia and Novipazar. The Austro-Hungarian Government was trying to smooth the way for the conference and he hoped his Government's intentions would be appreciated at Constantinople, and a hand extended for a friendly agreement.

STOP MILITARY MEASURES.

He would also be glad to see the Turko-Bulgarian negotiations lead to an understanding for which conditions were by no means unfavorable. Acting with that view, Austria in common with other powers, had dissuaded the Administrations at Constantinople and Sofia from adopting military measures calculated to increase mutual distrust.

With regard to Serbia and Montenegro, he said, neither was entitled to interfere in the matter in any way, but notwithstanding this his Government was willing to treat both with benevolence and take their interests into consideration. It would, however, be better for their own interest to set practical aims for their activity instead of pursuing dreams that could never be realized.

TYPHOID FEVER APPALLING

Health Department Reports 100 Cases in Kenora Hospital.

A despatch from Toronto says: Outbreaks of typhoid are once more reported from the lumber camps, where the lack of sanitary facilities and the lack of protection of water supplies, makes the disease almost inevitable.

Dr. Bell of the provincial health department reports 100 cases in Kenora hospitals, and the contractors' hospitals in connection with railway construction camps are filled up. He describes the conditions as appalling in the Rainy River District, though there are nine hospitals in 200 miles with doctors and nurses.

The men, generally foreigners, refuse to go to hospital when taken sick, and after sleeping out in an attempt to get to civilization, usually become hopeless cases.

The carelessness about the protection of water supply from sewage and poisonous garbage Dr. Bell considers the main cause of the prevalence of the disease.

THE BEST FLOUR. DAFOE'S NONESUCH DAFOE'S MANITOBA PATENT

By numerous tests by the best Bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best Flour in the market.

When buying Flour ask for Dafoe's and patronize your home mill, thereby producing Bran and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually, when it reaches you, of inferior quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the mechanic sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home store just as good, but he does not hesitate to buy Flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sell you an inferior Flour for more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

CHOICE CORN MEAL and BUCK-WHEAT FLOUR always on hand.

Napanee senior and junior football teams and a girls' basket ball team journeyed to Sydenham, Saturday, to play the return game with Sydenham but the Napanee boys and girls did not cover themselves with glory. They were beaten in every game.

On Friday morning last as Mr. Simons, a farmer living near Hay Bay, was coming to Napanee with a load of apples in crossing over on the ferry the horses became frightened, and despite the efforts of the two men the team backed off the ferry and were drowned. The wagon and load of apples were also lost.

On Saturday morning last, Mrs. Eliza Green, one of Napanee's best known and most respected old ladies, passed away, after a few weeks' illness, aged eighty-three years and five months. Deceased has lived in Napanee and vicinity all her life and was known to every one. She was bright and active and retained all her faculties in a remarkable manner. She leaves two sons and one daughter. One son, Edwin, lives in Denver, Col. Frederick resides in Cleveland, O. The latter was at her bedside for several days before the end took place. The remains were taken to Adolphus-town for interment.

Her maiden name was Maggie McKay. Since the death of her husband she has resided with her brothers in Owen Sound. Mr. Burrows left for Owen Sound to attend the funeral on Thursday afternoon.

Captain Roys, of the steamer Aletha, has given out the contract for a new excursion vessel to ply on the bay, river and lake, to a Kingston firm. The vessel is to be built mostly of steel, and will be 120 feet long with a capacity of 520 on the bay or 300 on the lake. Owing to previous orders, the boat will not be ready before the spring of 1910. The estimated speed is expected to be between fifteen and sixteen miles an hour.

A Fine Concert.

The audience that gathered in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, Oct. 28th, were greatly delighted with the recital by Miss Margaret London Shepherd, contralto soloist of the Metropolitan church, Toronto, and Miss Luella Hall, of Napanee. Our first word of recommendation should be for the programme itself. It was not too long and each number was of the highest order. After the first selection by each of the artists the audience would not be denied and each item was greeted with applause that called for an encore. To this request they responded as liberally as the audience could expect them when there were but two to render the programme. Of Miss Shepherd, as vocalist, only words of the highest praise can be spoken. A good voice may be attached from a superb physique, but it is joy to an audience to find these gifts of nature and of art going together. Miss Shepherd has a rich voice and physique and wins her audience by her simple naturalness. Her voice has the charm of firmness and of great compass, giving the comforting sense of great reserve and yet it is perfectly obedient to the lighter words and the pathos of song. We would all gladly welcome her again. Miss Hall our young townsmaid deserves words of highest praise also. She has been known as an organist of rare ability but she has also secured a place as a pianist of fine execution and a healthy interpretation of classic music.

A Sad Bereavement.

Maurice H. Asselstine, son of Mr. Samuel N. Asselstine, South Fredericksburgh, was accidentally killed in an elevator in Minneapolis, Minn., on Tuesday. Deceased was a former employee of Mr. F. H. Perry, and left Napanee nearly two years ago. His age was nineteen years, ten months and eleven days. The remains were brought to Napanee and the funeral will take place from his father's residence this afternoon at one o'clock. Service will be held in Bethel church and the remains placed in Morven vault. Besides his parents two brothers and three sisters remain. His two sisters, Mrs. E. O. Unger and son, and Miss Elizabeth Asselstine and Mr. D. A. Garrison accompanied the remains home from Minneapolis.

Married at Moscow.

On October 28th, a quiet and pretty wedding was solemnized at the beautiful home of W. H. Asselstine, Moscow, when his youngest daughter, Miss Flora Belle, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Frederick Allan Grant, Sydenham. The bride was daintily attired in a beautiful evening dress of chiffon, with cream and pink tints and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Rev. N. Batstone tied the nuptial knot. After the ceremony the guests, who were the immediate relatives of the bride and groom, sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner. The bride will be greatly missed in all circles. As superintendent of the Sunday school she was an ardent worker, and the school made rapid progress under her skillful charge. The presents were numerous and costly. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold necklace set with pearls. After a couple of hours spent in social intercourse the happy couple, amid showers of rice, were driven away in a Kingston cab with stately white horses. The bride looked charming in her travelling suit of striped green and black, with hat to match.

A Happy Event.

A very pretty house wedding took place at the home of Mrs. S. J. Miller, of MacDonald on Wednesday, Nov. 4th, when her eldest daughter, Charlotte Mary (Lotta) Wagar, was married to Mr. Edward Blake Huyck, son of Mr. Benjamin Huyck, of Adolphustown. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. DeMille in the presence of more than eighty relatives and friends. Just at twelve noon the bridal party entered the parlor, while Miss Vera Smith, cousin of the bride, played the wedding march. The bride, who was given away by her grandfather, Nelson L. Dean, was handsomely gowned in blue silk and carried a bouquet of white carnations. Miss Nellie Huyck, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Mr. James Miller supported the groom, while Madeline and Marguerite Miller were flower girls. Immediately after the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served and at 2:30 the young couple left for Napanee where they took the train for Watertown. The bride was the recipient of many and beautiful gifts, the groom's being a gold locket. That of the bride's mother was a fur lined coat, her brother and sister an enlarged portrait of father and mother. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Huyck, father and mother of the groom, silver tea spoons, Mrs. Huyck, grand-mother of the groom, silver knives and forks, Nellie Huyck, p'm jardiniere and stand. The large number of useful gifts and the warm words of congratulations are indicative of the esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

"But," exclaimed the man of delicate sensibilities, "will your conscience permit you to do as you suggest?"

"Look here, friend," answered the New York politician, "I am accustomed to be boss even of my own conscience."

"No," explained a friend, "that's your common sense."

Sciatic Pains Made Limbs Useless and Life a Burden.—South American Rheumatic Cure Snapped the Pain Chords and Cast Away the Crutches.

James Smith, Dairyman, Grimsby, Ont., writes: "I was a great sufferer from sciatica. For a time I was completely laid up and for two weeks I was compelled to go on crutches. My limbs were almost useless. I tried many remedies without benefit. South American Rheumatic Cure was recommended. It took six bottles to effect a cure, but I am thoroughly cured, and I heartily recommend it as the greatest of remedies." (10)

THE CHOLERA IN RUSSIA

Morgues Filled to the Ceilings With Corpses — Visitors Search for Relatives.

Of the happier inhabitants of lands where cholera is either unknown, or kept well in hand, the orgies of death which that terrible epidemic is holding in some of the smaller Russian towns would be incredible, writes a St. Petersburg correspondent. There, thanks to the lack of organization and grossly unhealthy conditions, victims have been lying ill in the streets, neglected in the hospitals, and unburied in the cemeteries. I have had reports of mortuaries so overcrowded that the corpses are stacked up from floor to ceiling. Those coming to claim relatives who died of other diseases have been obliged, in some cases, to spend hours in the pestilential air till they could find the bodies for which they searched, and could pull them from amongst the cholera-stricken.

When the cholera was first declared in other provinces, a commission was appointed in Saint Petersburg by M. Rezcov, the president of the town. But the chairman, M. Oppenheimer, left for Carisbad before any arrangements were made to combat the epidemic, and practically nothing was done. There is no drainage in Saint Petersburg worthy of the name. All the sewage is thrown into the canals, which are never cleaned more than once a year, and send up a as soon as the ice thaws in the spring. The first victims of the epidemic were workmen, cab-drivers and porters, who drink the water out of these canals, which is poison at the best of times, let alone when cholera is about. Now, the police have put up placards at the street corners to forbid them, under a threat of paying $5 penalty, to drink this water, and the magistracy has made arrangements for hot tea to be distributed gratis in all the principal streets. The sale of fruit has been strictly forbidden, and it, therefore, goes to other towns from the cholera-infected districts.

Considering these things, it is, therefore, not surprising to find that 300 and 400 cases occur daily, of which at least 50 per cent. prove fatal. Everybody who can afford to do so, has fled from the city. The dreaded disease has now found its way into the well-to-do houses and into the cadets' college. The hospital and town ambulances are quite unable to cope with the work, for people fall down ill who felt perfectly well a few minutes before. It is hard to believe that most of them are sent in cabs and public conveyances to the hospitals, but such is the case, and, what is more, these vehicles are not even cleaned afterward, to say nothing of being disinfected. As the poor cabbies are often not paid for taking a sick man to the hospitals, because nobody has any time to bother about them, they whip up their horses and get away as soon as they see a man or woman lying on the pavement in contortions, and the victim is left alone till one of the sanitary inspectors or a policeman sees him. When taken to the hospital the patient

JAPAN'S WAR ON THE PLAGUE

One Item the Killing and Dissection of 800,000 Rats a Year.

The plague in Japan first broke out in 1899, the cases numbering 230. The second visitation was in 1902 and 1903, the cases numbering 71. The third outbreak occurred on August 24, 1905. From then until the end of March, 1906, the cases numbered 103. The means employed for fighting the disease are given by the London Illustrated News as:

(1) Collecting and purchasing of rats at five sen a head (or rather body, for the whole carcass has to be delivered). To insure greater activity a ticket is given to every man who brings in a rat. This ticket is numbered, and may draw a maximum prize of yen 600.

(2) The distribution gratis of rat poison on application. Ten cakes of poison to each house. Delivered to 3,000 houses a day—30,000 cakes of poison at an average cost of about yen 75 a day.

(3) Cleaning of houses and godowns (warehouses).

(4) To prevent rats from reassembling in godowns extensive repairs are being carried on and all ground floors and walls rendered impenetrable. (In connection with this regulation the number of godowns considered in need of repair was 1,616).

(5) The damming of holes in drains to prevent rats getting out. This process was also carried out on the sea coast near the Kobe customs house.

(6) Inspection of patients. Doctors from the sanitary department make a house to house inspection and where any sick person is discovered carefully investigate the nature of the disease.

(7) Examination of dead bodies. (8) Injection of anti-plague serum in family of infected patient.

(9) Strict isolation.

The rats killed in Tokio from 1900 to June, 1906, numbered 4,820,000, an average of more than 800,000 a year. The ratio between the number of rats infected and the number of cases serves to prove beyond a doubt that these little animals are the most active disseminators of the disease; and the thoroughness and care with which the inspection is carried on is evinced by the fact that over 100,000 rats may be dissected without finding a trace of infection, yet vigilance is never relaxed.

Never for one instant do the surgeons forget that the very next one may contain microbes enough to depopulate the largest city. The marvellous rapidity with which the examination is done can be imagined when one learns that from 2,000 to 3,000 rats are examined a day, according to the number brought in.

The cakes of poison supplied by the Government are made of sweet potato, red pepper and arsenic and are colored with methyl violet to prevent children eating them by mistake. The cleaning of houses is carried out most thoroughly twice every year, whole streets being taken at a time. Everything is brought out of the houses and piled up in the streets. Dirt, dust and refuse of all kinds are carted away and burned.

INVOLUNTARY VACATION FROM

SOME HOLIDAYS THAT COULD NOT BE HELPED.

People Who Went Away from Home and Had a Very Unpleasant Experience.

A year or two ago an American family consisting of father, son, and two daughters, arrived at Chalkis, in the island of Euboea, and put up at the hotel there.

They were evidently well-off, and spent money freely. They had been travelling all through Greece, and meant in a month's time to return to Athens, and thence to make their way home.

Suddenly their regular weekly remittances stopped, and, cabling to America, the head of the family received a reply that, through the loss of a lawsuit, he was ruined and absolutely penniless.

The hotel bill amounted to nearly $500, and they had no funds to settle it. The landlord allowed them the use of one room in the basement, and here the unfortunate people were obliged to drag out a miserable existence for weeks until a newspaper reporter discovered their plight, and succeeded in interesting the American Legation. A sum of money was at last raised sufficient to enable the family to end their miserable enforced vacation.

These Americans are by no means the only people who, having left home for a holiday, have found themselves unable to return at the appointed time. Only last March an English clergyman, staying at Maderia for a short holiday, had the curious experience of being turned into a stowaway and carried across two oceans before he saw home again.

He went to lunch with a friend aboard the big South American liner, Araguaya, which had called at Maderia, and, chatting over a cigar, never noticed that the vessel had slipped her moorings. When he got on deck, the ship was three miles from land. Being a mail boat, the Araguaya could not turn back, so the poor gentleman, who had, of course, no luggage, and only fifteen shillings in his pocket, was carried to Pernambuco, Brazil. There he left the ship, travelled to Bahia, caught a steamer, and came home via Portugal. In all, his travels amounted to 7,000 miles!

Speaking of being carried away to sea, a couple of Maltese tradesmen went aboard H.M.S. Caesar one morning to collect certain money due to them. The old saying in the Navy is, "The first turn of the screw pays all debts." However that may be, the two tradesmen were horrified, on returning to the deck, to find the great warship steaming out of harbor. The next land they sighted was Gibraltar, and from that place they had to get home again as best they might.

The victim of as mysterious a case of "shanghaiing" as ever was heard of was Johann Magers, a steward of the German liner, Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. The man got a holiday at Bremerhaven in order to get married. On the way between the ship and his bride's house he disappeared, and was not seen or heard of again for nearly a fortnight.

His story is that he was spoken to by a strange man just after leav-

NOT HALF ENOUGH DOCTORS, and medical students, though offered good pay by the town, refuse to help. One doctor often has 400 patients to look after in a day. Nurses are almost unknown; there is nobody to give patients medicine or try their temperature, so that the result is a huge percentage of deaths. As one harassed, work-to-death doctor said, "If they get well they do—and if they don't, it's not my fault, for I've only one pair of hands and legs." Patients suffering from other complaints have as bad a time of it as anybody—not only do they get no attention now, but many of them have been sent away because they must make room for cholera cases. Several large barracks are also full of them—but what is that when hundreds fall ill daily?

There is in St. Petersburg a hospital regulation to the effect that every patient who dies within twenty hours of admittance must be dissected. It is characteristic of Russian red tape that this regulation was adhered to for several days after the cholera broke out, so that the operating theatres were piled high with dead bodies which nobody had any time to dissect. At last it struck one of the inspectors that it is impossible to dissect 400 corpses daily, and the regulation was abolished.

The victims are buried outside the town, so that the coffins must go by train. Thirty or forty trucks are filled with the coffins of those who have died a day or so before, and two or three passenger saloons are put on for the dead people's friends and relatives. Such a train started the other day by the Mikolajewski Railway.

CARRYING 150 COFFINS.

On arriving at the cemetery, it was found that 34 coffins, brought the day before, were still awaiting burial. Though the grave-diggers had worked hard till midnight, it was impossible to bury all, and the rest were piled up for the night in the cemetery, the mourners waiting there till daylight, afraid that, if they went away, others would arrive in the morning and get their dead buried first. These scenes are repeated daily, and many wait for a couple of days before they see their dead relatives and friends buried. As all the coffins are alike, being painted with tar, and no inscriptions are put on them, very few people know which box really contains the remains of their dearest ones. The result is that the most terrible scenes of despair and protestation occur whilst the wailings of women and children fill the air.

In the provinces, things are no better, and disinfection is almost unheard of in small towns. In one village called Karinki, in the government of Tver, 470 out of 500 died. It was decided to burn everything, corpses, houses and barns together. The police came and, giving the 30 survivors time to get away, threw firebrands into the place. This drastic measure seemed to be the only way of preventing the epidemic spreading all over the province.

retute of all kinds are carried away and burned.

COSTLY SHOOTING.

Expense of Entertaining the King is $50,000 a Week.

Shooting, while a capital sport in England, is not recommended for those whose purses are limited, especially if they have ambitions to be the hosts of royalty. That season just now in swing has cost several notable families in English society at least $50,000 apiece for the privilege of entertaining his majesty for a week with the guns. The majority of these families, however, consider the honor cheap at the price, and many of them are justified in doing so, for they owe to the King their social position in England.

Of course, the $50,000, which is the lowest estimate of the cost of entertaining his majesty is not all spent in the week when he is on the ground. As a matter of fact, the preliminaries account for the better part of the amount. Something like $25,000 is paid as rent for the moors and coverts and at least $5,000 for the mansion called the shooting-box. The moors generally extend to at least 20,000 acres and the modern hosts of English royalty would hardly dare to invite King Edward to anything smaller. Such an enormous piece of ground requires a dozen keepers costing $5,000 a year and the preservation of game, food, repairs and incidentals will amount for another $5,000. For the keep of the mansion itself an enormous figure is required, especially as a little army of servants is needed, frequently numbering as many as 35.

Then there is the question of the fellow-guests. The King is invariably consulted in this respect and in almost every case a full dozen are invited to meet and amuse his majesty. These dukes and lords and generals arrive in their motor cars each with his own chauffeur, footman and valet, while each lady brings her own maid and private secretary, and many of them their own private hairdresser. The King and some of the dukes go so far as to bring with them their own favorite gun-leaders and royalty is always accompanied by its private butler. It is not overestimating to say that each guest averages five servants, and the host of a shooting party of a dozen guns would, therefore, not have to provide for twelve, but for 72 persons.

When the enormous cost of one of these royal shooting parties is taken into account, it is not surprising that the hosts of his majesty calculate that each brace of birds will cost him something like $50 and that to get the cost as low as that, the moors will have to be plentifully stocked and his guests crack shots.

THE RESULT.

"Nox, Willie, you know I told you not to go swimming, and yet you have been in the water."

"I know it, ma; but Satan tempted me."

"And why did you not tell Satan to get behind you?"

"I did, and he kicked me in."

Hearing, instead of sight, is to play an important part in a new system of signalling which is to be introduced by the Great Western Railway Company of England. The audible signals are as follows:—Danger, a special steam whistle; all right, an electric bell. The signal is produced by purely mechanical means.

LORD KITCHENER.

An Incident Which Shows the Character of the Man.

Lord Kitchener is one of Britain's greatest generals; but he is respected, rather than loved by those serving under him. Stern and reserved in his manner, he is, however, very just. Rank does not influence him. The bluest-blooded subaltern is treated as impartially as an ordinary "Tommy."

During the South African campaign, a private of exemplary character reported himself as unfit for duty. The doctor, however, thought otherwise, and ordered the man back to work. Later on the soldier found himself growing much weaker, and spoke to the sergeant.

"Why not tell Lord Kitchener?" was the reply. "He's in his office."

This the soldier feared to do, but the sergeant went straight in and laid the case before Kitchener.

"Send the man here, and fetch Drs. A. and B.," commanded "K. of K.," without looking up from his work.

The two doctors examined the patient in the presence of his lordship, and pronounced him to be suffering from typhoid fever.

"Now send for Dr. C."

This was the doctor who had practically accused the patient of malingering. He, too, examined the patient, and then said nervously:

"Sir, I fear I have made a mistake. This man is suffering from typhoid in an early stage."

"Remove him at once to the hospital," was Kitchener's reply.

"And you, Dr. C., apply to the adjutant for your papers, and return to England at your earliest convenience."

A SILLY QUESTION.

Little Billie—Certainly. Don't you know who you are?

steward of the German liner, Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. The man got a holiday at Bremerhaven in order to get married. On the way between the ship and his bride's house he disappeared, and was not seen or heard of again for nearly a fortnight.

His story is that he was spoken to by a strange man just after leaving the ship, and after that he remembered no more until he found himself struggling in a canal. He got out, and found himself in Amsterdam, but how he got there he could not imagine. His money was gone, the name on his overcoat had been torn off, and his head was shaven. As not a penny was left in his pockets, Magers was obliged to tramp the whole way back to Bremerhaven.

Not mysterious, but very unpleasant, was the adventure which befell the wife of a lighthouse inspector in November, 1906. Her husband took her for a cruise to visit that graveyard of the Atlantic, Sable Island, and, as the weather was delightful, she greatly enjoyed the trip. She was so deeply interested in the island and its inhabitants, that she insisted upon staying a night at the lighthouse settlement while her husband returned to the ship. During the night a heavy gale came on, and the steamer was forced to leave the dangerous neighborhood. The storm raged for a week, coal was running low, and the vessel had to return to Portland, Maine.

In the end the poor lady was obliged to spend nearly six weeks marooned on the island. She has probably had enough of lighthouses to last her for the rest of her life.

The experience of Mr. John E. Ward, a wealthy Canadian, may be cited as a warning to holiday-makers who go off alone on walking tours through country they are not familiar with. In the winter of 1903 Mr. Ward went to California on business, and took a short holiday to explore the country afoot. Tramping across the wild country inland from San Bernardino, he got lost, and wandered for three days without food or water, subsisting on the pith of the leaves of the prickly cactus. He was nearly dead when picked up by a party of prospectors. By a curious irony of fate, Mr. Ward had two thousand dollars in his pocket, yet no doubt he would have exchanged all for a loaf.—Pearson's Weekly.

SANDY'S FLITTING DAY

HOW SCOTLAND CELEBRATES MAY TWENTY-EIGHTH.

The "Guid Wife" Takes Great Pride in Showing Her Household Possessions.

Scotland celebrates not a few peculiarly national events. What true-born Scot, for instance, would ever dream of working on the First of January! What day is more sacred to the Caledonian abroad than St. Andrew's Day! And then picture the wild enthusiasm of the Scot, either at home or abroad, when the day, or, rather, the "nicht" for toasting the "Immortal Memory" of Burns comes round! But the Scot has still another event on his calendar, which gives us an ever more subtle insight into his character. That day is May 28th, the day on which he removes to a new abode, or flits, says Pearson's Weekly.

Why the Scot should annually change his residence in a mystery. Theorists ascribe his wandering proclivities to the supposition that he is the lineal descendant of the lost tribes of Israel. Other and more practical minds hold that his migratory habits are due to the manner in which houses in the north are rented on yearly tenancies from Whitsunday to Whitsunday. HER TWENTY-FIRST "HOOSE."

Be that as it may, the fact remains that the Scot is the slave of the flitting or removal habit, and were you in Glasgow, Dundee, or Aberdeen on May 28th, you would be astonished to find every forry or dray laden like brokers' vans with furniture of a more or less valuable nature, while every second person you would meet would be wrestling with a kitchen clock, umbrella stand, or other household article more or less useful and ornamental.

So deeply ingrained into his nature is the flitting habit, that Sandy takes it as a matter of course, and so does his good lady. One worthy matron amazed that the custom should be cause for astonishment, said:

"Me and John's been mairrit since aichty-seeven and this is oor twentieth hoose!"

By noon the outgoing tenant must vacate the house and hand over the key to the landlord, or factor, as the house agent is called.

It may happen that the Scot gets possession of the new house a day or two before the 28th. In that event he is able to conduct his "flitting" in a more leisurely fashion; but, if not, then out into the street must his household gods and goods be deposited, to await the arrival of the vehicles, which are to convey them to the new habitation.

This proceeding, it may be whispered, is not unpleasant to the wife of the Scot, and she is, indeed, a "proud, proud woman," as she surveys her chiffonier and American organ displayed on the footpath, exciting the admiration and envy of curious spectators.

COVERED VANS DESPISED.

For a similar reason the Scots-woman views with distrust and suspicion the efforts that are being made to popularize covered vans in Caledonia.

CRUEL HUSBANDS.

Men Who Have Imprisoned Their Wives for Years.

The Lisbon papers have been devoting columns of space to the misdeeds of Count Margalho, one of King Manoel's Lords-in-Waiting, who, inflamed by jealousy, is alleged to have imprisoned his young wife in an upper turret room of his chateau of Alemjeto, whence she was released by the police in a condition bordering on idiocy.

Such high-minded proceedings as these read curiously now-a-days. Yet a few generations back, apparently, such an incident would have passed almost unnoticed.

No one, for example, thought anything the worse of our own King George I. for condemning his wife, the beautiful and talented Princess Sophia, to lifelong imprisonment, because of her alleged intrigue with Count Konigsmark.

Then, too, there was the case of the Earl of Belvedere, who shut up his young Countess in Gaultstown Castle, Westmeath, and kept her there a close captive for two-and-thirty years. Once she escaped, and fled to her father in Dublin. But such were the exaggerated notions held at that time regarding a husband's authority over his wife, that he handed his daughter back unprotestingly to the earl, who had her immured more closely than ever. His death brought her release at last, but the erstwhile lovely, light-hearted girl had been transformed by then into a decrepit, white-haired old woman.

More shocking still was the fate of Harriet Staunton, whose husband imprisoned her in the windowless attic of a lonely Kentish farmhouse, where she presently succumbed to starvation and ill-usage. This abominable crime, however, did not go unavenged, no fewer than four persons being placed upon their trial, and condemned to death, and, although the capital sentences were afterwards commuted, two of the culprits, at all events died in gaol.

CEYLON COMBS.

Men Wear Them But the Women are Innocent of the Adornment.

Perhaps there is nothing in Cingalese customs, writes H. W. Cave in "The Book of Ceylon," that strikes the stranger from the West as so extraordinary as the custom which requires the male population of the low country to wear long hair twisted into a coil at the back of the head and a horseshoe-shaped tortoise-shell comb at the top, while the women remain innocent of the form of adornment. One of the great ambitions of the men of humble position is to possess and wear a huge comb of the finest lustre and most perfect manufacture; and many mark their higher social position with an additional comb, which rises to a considerable height above their glossy coil.

The custom supports a large number of manufactures. The artist in tortoise-shell obtains his raw material from the hawkbill turtle. His methods of detaching the scales were once so barbarous and cruel that a special law had to be passed forbidding them.

The poor creatures used to be captured and suspended over a fire till the heat made the scales drop off, and then the turtles were released to grow more.

The practise arose from the circumstance that if the shell were taken from the animal after death

MONSTER SPIDER.

Web is Strong Enough to Catch Flying Birds.

Travellers in the mountains of Ceylon and India speak of a gigantic spider that is to be found there. It measures about six inches across, and is quite handsome—if a spider can be that. The under part of the body is either bright gold or scarlet, and the upper part is covered with a delicate slate-colored fur. The web spun by it is like yellow silk, with a central net five feet in length. The web is strong enough to catch and hold a good sized bird. Sometimes a man rides into one of them without seeing it, and the threads wrap about his face like the silk cords of a real net. Having spun its web, the spider sits motionless, waiting for its victim. Presently some large insect, or perhaps a bird, comes flying against it, and is at once caught in the meshes. Then the monster runs first across the net and begins throwing the coils around the captive. It works rapidly and soon has the head completely wrapped up, so that the captive is first blinded and then choked. The bite of the spider is not poisonous, like that of the tarantula, but a man that ran into one of these webs, and got nipped in the nose by the watchful owner, says its jaws are as strong as the beak of a bird. Here and there in the forest may be found skeletons of birds hanging in the webs, the threads of which are strong enough to retain the bones after the weather has destroyed the flesh and blown away the feathers.

SOME ROYAL BABIES.

Little Princelings Were Hedged About With Ceremony.

Royal babies in the days of long ago generally had two cradles, one for every day, and another, a very grand one, for state occasions, when visitors came to see them and kiss their tiny hands, in courtier fashion. Little Prince Edward, afterwards Edward VI., was taken so much care of that no one was allowed to go near his cradle without an order signed by the King. He had two nurses, "Mother Jak" and "Sibilla Penne," and four "rockers," that is, people to rock the cradle. James I. actually had five rockers, one of whom was called Jane Crummy. When he began to toddle he was assisted by leading strings of rose-colored silk. It was not all joy to be born in a palace in those days. Nobody might take the little princeling up but the proper person, or hunt for the pin that was pricking him; and if that person were absent the baby might scream himself hoarse, and nothing could be done. It was, as a writer of that time said, a "real misery."

The great difference between men is more likely to be in perspiration than in inspiration.

curious spectators.

COVERED VANS DESPISED.

For a similar reason the Scotchman views with distrust and suspicion the efforts that are being made to popularize covered vans in Caledonia.

"Whit's the guid o' haein' a piano," she cries, "if naeboddy sees it when ye're flittin'?" This question seems unanswerable, and it is not too much to assume that, should the covered van actually catch on in Scotland, it may yet give the death-blow to Sand's migratory habits.

From the above remarks it is not difficult to conceive that the building of a "fitting" on an open vehicle is nothing short of a work of art, or should one say miracle? Woe betide the contractor who places the bookcase on the cart in such a position that the back only is seen and not the handsome glass-paneled doors.

According to unwritten law, again the parlor mirror must hang gracefully behind the car. This arrangement is not without its advantages, and, in Scotland, if you are perplexed as to your outward appearance, all you require to do is to stroll behind the nearest fitting, and, behold! you see yourself as others see you!

His goods and chattels having been installed in his new house, the Scot proceeds to consider his list of casualties. Invariably, he finds that, after a fitting, his furniture is not nearly so valuable as it was a week or two previously.

As he makes out his list of accidents, and also receives the bills presented by the upholsterer, the plumber, the sweep, and other individuals, whose presence is always necessary at removals, the Scot groans in spirit, and heroically resolves to fit no more, a good resolution which he keeps until May 25th comes around again.

INDIA'S GREEN FLY.

A Serious Menace to the Comfort of the People.

One of the evils of Calcutta is the plague of green flies, from which the whole city suffers at certain times in the year. The happy hunting-time of these minute insects is during the late autumn and early winter. They are a serious nuisance both in and out of doors. They wing their way through all the open doors, into the houses, and into every room, making life unbearable.

Like most insects, the little green flies have a great affection for the flame. On occasion the inhabitants have found it necessary to put out all the gaslights—even at a public dinner—and to take their meals practically in deep gloom, illuminated only by flickering candles.

Naturally, it is not at all pleasant to go on eating with dense clouds of insects swarming overhead, or roasted to death, falling about one in pattering showers.

They seem to spring into existence from nowhere: perhaps it is almost dusk, when the lights of the street-lamps are becoming visible. Then, suddenly, the air, which a moment before was quite clear, is full of myriads of green flies, drifting in misty patches, and obscuring the street-lamps.

Often the number of insects which have been scorched to death is so great that little heaps of them collect inside the lamps, while bucket-loads have to be swept up from the next morning.

were once so numerous and cruel that a special law had to be passed forbidding them.

The poor creatures used to be captured and suspended over a fire till the heat made the scales drop off, and then the turtles were released to grow more.

The practise arose from the circumstance that if the shell were taken from the animal after death the color became cloudy and milky. This, however, can be obviated by killing the turtle and immediately immersing the carcass in boiling water.

The plates, when separated from the bony part of the animal, are very irregular in form. They are flattened by heat and pressure. Being very brittle, they require careful manipulation, especially as a high temperature, which would soften them, tends to darken and cloud the shell. They are therefore treated at as low a heat as is possible for the work. Thickness is obtained by softening several plates and then applying pressure, when a union of the surface takes place. Under heat the shell is also molded into various artificial forms.

Some Strange Reasons for Wanting to Sever the Marriage Tie.

Never, surely, was stranger reason for a divorce than that lately advanced by a Mrs. Richards, who, in the Chicago courts, applied for a decree against her husband, who is secretary of a local football club, on the ground that his club lost too many matches during the season. The husband did not oppose his wife's petition, as only when his team won was his home at all endurable.

Persecution by photograph is a novel reason for demanding a separation. Because Mr. Hollums, of Newark, N. J., spoke an impassioned address to a young lady into a phonograph, which he nightly placed outside his wife's door, he was haled before a judge. Both he and the lady who was the chief cause of the trouble declared that Mrs. Hollums was the subject of hallucination, but these statements were successfully traversed by the injured wife, who, having secured the phonograph, produced it in court.

"Evander loved me too well to make life with him endurable. I expected my husband to be a strong oak on which I might lean. I did not want a man to give me my way in everything," said Mrs. Evander L. Craig, of St. Louis, who last year sued her husband for divorce in the Missouri courts because he was too affectionate.

To which complaint her husband made answer: "My treatment of my wife is not that to which she was accustomed at her own home. When we were married she thought her life heavenly; now she says she yearns for a man who will boss her plenty and make her stand round. About this oak-tree business, I believe that if a branch of some sturdy tree had been properly administered where it would do most good from time to time I could have proved myself more worthy of the title of model husband."

On very similar grounds Mrs. Byrning lately obtained a divorce at Denver from her husband, a travelling passenger agent on the Northern Pacific Railway. "He has no strength of mind," she averred, "and grants all my requests without a question. There is no satisfaction in such a humdrum existence."

Ghosts have played important parts in the Divorce Court. Mrs. Anna Rivers's life was rendered unbearable by the spook of her husband's first partner, which haunted the house and made matters generally unpleasant, smashing the furniture and playing other outrageous pranks in approved poltergeist fashion. At last, rendered desperate, she sought relief in the Divorce Court. So, too, did a Mr. Bates, when he charged his wife with carrying on a perfervid flirtation with the spirit of Mr. Florence, the celebrated actor, whom she had promised to marry at her death.

"It is not unlawful for women to attract mankind with devices and attachments used to improve the work of Nature. Otherwise why should not false hair and other falsities peculiar to females be made a ground for divorce?" Thus spoke Judge Davis, when dismissing the petition for divorce brought by Charles Kraus against his wife, on the ground that she had concealed the imperfections of a glass eye and a false leg until after they had been married.

True fruits are not unwilling to be hidden by the leaves.

would not be dropped. What the Liberal party has to complain of is that its political foes took advantage of these admissions and endeavored to transfer them to another set of charges of a wholly different kind. The species of logic employed was that as there had been irregularities in making purchases for the Department of Marine and Fisheries it was also true that the western timber limits had been leased on a system of favoritism; that the sale to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company had not been effected in the public interest, and that the arrangement with the Robbins Irrigation Company was a scandalous instance of favoring private interests.

These transactions have been examined with the microscope, and yet no fairminded man would say that they are transactions to be condemned. It is a striking commentary on the last of three that the Government is now being petitioned to grant the company more favorable terms, as it has been unable to prosecute its enterprise under its bargain. The Opposition contention was that the sale was a "deal" by which friends of the Government would profit enormously. Now it is represented as being ready to forfeit payments already made rather than go on an unprofitable bargain.

In ways quite as convincing and striking every major charge has been refuted. As to the lesser faults of administration, they raise for the most part in the system of giving out orders for supplies. The Liberal party is only continuing the system practised by its predecessors, and that is in force in every Provincial Government in Canada at this good hour and moment. It was the height of hypocrisy for Mr. Hanna, Mr. Roblin and Mr. Hazen to sit on platforms and hear the "graff" in the Department of Marine and Fisheries denounced, when the Governments of which they are members adhere strictly to the principle that Government contracts must be confined as far as possible to Government supporters. A whole series of Mr. Hazen's letters have been published, in which he was shown to be actively concerning himself in getting contracts for his supporters in St. John in 1896, actually inducing the Conservative Minister of Marine and Fisheries to increase the figures of contracts in order to afford more profit to his political friends.

These facts are not cited to afford an excuse for continuing the system. The Liberal Government has made a good beginning of the work of civil service reform. The movement for administrative improvement will not stop here. Judge Cassels' inquiry will furnish a body of fact that will undoubtedly be followed by a revolution in the methods by which supplies are obtained in the various departments. It may look like a small thing, but if the change takes from the Government in power all political advantage from public expenditures of that kind the Liberal Administration will have the right to inscribe on its already fine record something of which Liberals will be proud for many a year to come.

The Value of Money.

"Oh, yes," replied the millioned matron, "we make a point of allowing our boy pocket money regularly. Every week his papa hands Bobby $1,000 in small change, dimes and twenties. It would amuse you to hear him try to beat down a justice of the peace who's fining him for having killed somebody with his automobile. Now you listen to his reasoning."

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure," as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

"THE president is going to have a twenty-five pound bird for his dinner," mused Sam Hestor on his uncertain way to his home in Floyd street, Cleveland, on the eve of Thanksgiving last year. "What's the matter with Sam Hestor having a big bird?"

About this time he was passing the zoo. In the large inclosure was the pet ostrich, Charley. Hestor got his eye on Charley, and visions of a Thanksgiving feast of which Floyd street would talk for years came into his mind.

A few minutes later a policeman discovered Hestor chasing the ostrich around the pen. At times he got a

THE PROGRESS OF REFORM.

Some Opposition journals have thought fit since the elections to reaffirm the general charges of corruption which played so great a part in their campaign. To such general charges there can be no other answer than a general denial. The Opposition campaign was indeed cunningly conceived. There were administrative faults which Liberals did not deny. They had indeed been partially laid bare in committee, but were followed up by investigations instituted by the Government itself. The Opposition Press took great care never to allude to this latter fact, although it has a most important bearing on the whole case. It makes a good deal of difference in the moral aspect of a thing whether the deed complained of is done with the knowledge or at the instigation of the guardians of the people's interests. It makes a good deal of difference, moreover, whether the Government endeavors to cover up the wrongdoing or, on the other hand, is solicitous to find it out, to visit punishment on the offender, or provide a remedy. A Government, indeed, is to be judged by its zeal and courage in eliminating maladministration when ever uncovered, and it shows the greater courage to do this when the disclosures are brought about by its opponents.

There was no pretence that cases of departmental misdoings or blundering had not been revealed. Sir Wilfrid Laurier in more than one of his speeches spoke with perfect frankness of it, and promised that the inquiry only a trifle; but, do you know, it teaches him the value of money? He isn't quite ten years old, yet he manages his little revenue with a great deal of foresight. It would amuse you to hear him try to beat down a justice of the peace who is fining him for having killed somebody with his automobile. Yes, we insist on his paying for injuries out of his allowance. We buy his automobiles, but the fines he has to take care of himself."—Puck.

A Helping Hand.

Among the contributors to a minister's donation party was a small but very bright boy belonging to one of the families of the congregation. After obtaining his mother's permission to spend his money for anything he pleased he went to the village store and returned home with a neat package. In it was a pair of suspenders, and attached to them was a card upon which was written in a scrawling hand: "For the support of our pastor."

He Knew His Mamma.

Neighbor Bertie, your mother is calling you. Bertie—Yes'm, I know it, but I fancy she don't want me very badly. Neighbor—But she has called you seven times already. Bertie—Yes, I know, but she hasn't called "Albert" yet.

Remembering Sir Mackenzie Bowell's prediction that Messrs. In the constituency no one questioned the integrity of either candidate, and nothing was heard of either booze or boodle. Here the contest was decided almost entirely on the policy of the two political parties, and the large majority given to Dr. Neely shows that the policy of the Liberal Government is the policy that suits the farmers.

ANNUAL CONVENTIONS OF HORTICULTURAL AND VEGETABLE GREWER'S ASSOCIATIONS

The annual Convention of the Ontario Horticultural Association which is the Central Organization of the Horticultural Societies in the Province of Ontario, will be held at the City Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 10th and 11th, commencing at 2 p. m. A very interesting programme has been arranged bearing on all phases of Horticultural work, and a large attendance is expected.

On Thursday, Nov. 12th, the Ontario Vegetable Grower's Association will hold its Annual Convention in the City Hall, the first session starting at 9 a. m.

Both these Conventions are being held during the week of the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition when single rates are in force on all the railways in Ontario, thus enabling Delegates and all others interested in Horticultural and vegetable growing to be present at a minimum expense.

The charge of trying to steal the pet of the Cleveland zoo was not pressed, and he was allowed to go home and fall to on a real bird.

Thanksgiving Decorations.

Tiny paper pumpkins make attractive place cards, or if one is skilled in the use of water colors a clever one may be made from water color board decorated with fruits or flowers. Tiny canoes of birch bark to hold the buttonholes make acceptable souvenirs. If one has not the time or talent to make place card favors very clever little papier mache bonbon boxes may be bought, representing roast turkey, mince pies, pumpkins or other designs appropriate to the season. Tiny wish-bones polished with sandpaper and tied to a card are very satisfactory and suggest the kindly thought of the hostess.

Ragmuffin Parades.

But twelve permits were issued by the police of New York for "ragmuffin" parades through the city's streets last Thanksgiving day. Patrolman Frederick Kemmerlein of the bureau of information said that he remembered when 100 and even more permits were issued for Thanksgiving day parades only four or five years back. Among the best known of the ragmuffin associations which did not apply for marching permits were the Original Hound Guards, the Eagle Rangers, the Home Guards, the MacKerel Rangers, the Phoenix Light Guard and the Stickville Slenderfoot Army.

Thanksgiving on the Continent.

Germany and Russia adopt the rather sensible plan of appointing Thanksgiving days when they have some special reason for so doing, though Russia hasn't had much to be thankful for in late years. In Hungary Thanksgiving days or something analogous to them used to be common, but have now passed away, except on rare occasions of national rejoicing. Then a horse race of a particularly exciting description takes the place that Thanksgiving in the American observance takes in the way of Thanksgiving.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of known composition. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 31 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound. If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels.

GRATEFUL JAILBIRDS.

They Tell Missouri Governor Their Reasons For Thanks.

The following is a copy of a sketch headed "Why We Are Thankful," written by the prisoners in jail at Macon, Mo., last Thanksgiving day and placed in the hands of the sheriff with the request to let the light shine on it:

Dear Governor—We have read your Thanksgiving proclamation with interest and will abide by your suggestions as well as we may be able in our limited environments. Although unjustly shut out from the world at present, we have much to be thankful for. The papers are not pitching into us and calling us hard names like they do Mr. Rockefeller, Senator Platt, Willie Hearst and other men with a larger measure of liberty. Our appetite is of the never-get-weary kind, and we don't have to take treatment for insomnia.

We are not nervous concerning burglars and holdup men, and our diamonds are the least of our worries. Nobody comes round and tries to work us on wild-cat mining stock or sell us gold bricks. The coal man hasn't come after his money, and we don't look for him. Snow, ice, sleet and whiffy winds are nothing to us. We don't have to get up early Sunday morning and fix for Sunday school.

Three times a day, week in and week out, we get beans, corn dodger and well water, except on holidays, when there's a double dose of water.

In looking over these matters we feel that we are blist far beyond the common run, for which we are deeply thankful, governor. We feel satisfied. We don't care to get any nearer where you live, much as we like you. Your ways are not our ways, and we wish to be particular and lead a quiet, orderly life. Respectfully,

GEORGE GREEN,

CANADA'S POOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A Story more Touching than anything from the Pen of the gifted Ian MacLaren.

In the current issue of the DOOR OF HOPE, published by the National Sanitarium Association, 317 King Street West, Toronto, a page is given over to letters received from the many persons from all parts of the Dominion seeking admission to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Seldom have we read anything more pathetic. Here, for example, is a letter from a physician in Creemore, Ont., asking for the admission of a patient by the name of Morrison. He says:—

"I would like to urge strongly upon you the great claims of this patient. He has no home—mother dead—father working as a farm laborer. The boy has been living with an unmarried uncle—no housekeeper—work, cooking, etc., being done by the uncle. The boy has absolutely no place to go where he might be given any reasonable care, and he can get none where he is."

Another case is from Thorold. Johnston Weldon writes:—

"I am a young married man, twenty-three years of age. For several years I have been sick, but always able to keep my feet. Now I have come to the time when I cannot work, and cannot get medicine without means. My lungs are affected, and I am writing now to see if you can get me into the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives. My young wife is here, and her parents have kindly opened their doors to her if I go away."

Just one more of the many we might quote. This is from a physician in Campbellford, Ont. He writes:—

"I have a patient suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, who has been laid off work for about three months now—was in bed part of that time, but latterly both his pulse and temperature have kept down and his weight going up. He is the only support of the family—mother, crippled father, and younger brother, but his neighbors are trying to raise a small amount of money to help him."

We have sometimes thought that if Ian MacLaren, who has given to us the character of Dr. McClure, were alive to-day that in letters such as these he would find material for a book more touching and pathetic in many parts than his Bonnie Briar Bush.

It is on behalf of cases like these, of which there are scores reaching the Secretary of the Sanatorium every week, that the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives makes its appeal to-day for funds.

This institution has not at any time, since its doors were first opened in April, 1902, refused a single patient because of the applicant being unable to pay.

Contributions may be sent to Mr. W. J. Gage, 81 Spadina Ave., Chairman of the Executive Committee, or to J. S. Robertson, Secretary-Treasurer of the National Sanitarium Association, 317 King Street West, Toronto, Ontario.

WOOD LOTS OF JAPAN.

Example Furnished of Tree Growing on Small Plots.

In these times of great drains on the timber supplies, caused by the heavy demand for forest products of all kinds, Americans may see in Japan an example of what can be done in growing wood on small plots.

That country contains 21,000,000 wood lots, about three-fourths of which belong to private persons and one-fourth to communes. The average size of the plot is less than nine-tenths of an acre. They usually occupy the steepest, roughest, poorest ground. In this way land is put to use which would otherwise go to waste and if unwooded would have to be cleared by the

DIED GIVING THANKS.

Father Fell From Chair While Recounting Family's Blessings.

George Douglas Keen, an accountant employed by the Bush Terminal company, sat down to his Thanksgiving dinner at his home, 200 Twenty-eighth street, Brooklyn, at 4 o'clock last Thanksgiving day. Before him was a large turkey, and seated about the table were his wife, Anna, and his three children—Douglas, eight years old; Alva, five, and Gordon, three.

Great preparations had been made for the dinner, and Mr. Keen felt satisfied with the outlook across the table. It was a holiday. The wind outside was cold, and the warmth inside was all the more genial.

"Well, I guess we have a little something to be thankful for, Mrs. Keen," said the head of the house.

He helped his wife, his children and then himself. Then he sat down and put a piece of turkey in his mouth.

"Yes," he went on, "I guess, taking everything altogether, we have"—

Then he fell out of his chair dead. The doctor said it was heart disease.

Italy's Thanksgiving Day.

A village festival is about the nearest thing the people of Italy have to a Thanksgiving day, but the two things are the same in spirit if very different in detail. At these festivals a primitive interchange of labor takes place. Everybody helps everybody. No wage is given. This man's vines facing full south are forward, another man's are bare backward. From all the hill-sides around the peasants flock to each other as needed. Occasionally an Italian will do a lot of work in a day, but he will not hurry. He is making love meanwhile to the girl who works with him.

A Polar Thanksgiving.

Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., contemplating the coming joys of Thanksgiving "fixings," was moved to tell of the way he spent the same day two years ago.

"We were then within less than 500 miles of the pole, and of course the usual arctic weather prevailed," he said. "No, we had no turkey for our dinner that day, but we made out very well with a roast of musk ox and some canned plum pudding, which we took along on the Roosevelt for just such occasions. That comprised the total of our menu."

FAMOUS FAST AND FEAST.

One Preceded and One Followed the Civil War.

Queerly enough, both national fasts and national Thanksgiving were affected by the civil war. President Buchanan appointed a day of national fasting and prayer to avert civil war. Republican governors of states in some instances ignored it and in others took notice of it in a way to rub their ideas against Buchanan and his party into their proclamations. Democratic governors, south and north, under the form of an appeal to the Deity, canonized Republicanism to the best of their ability.

As President Buchanan called the nation to prayer to avert civil war, so did President Lincoln call it to thanksgiving for victories in a civil war, to the end that more victories might bring union and peace. Of course, as Mr. Buchanan was ignored or satirized in antipathetic political quarters in the north, so was President Lincoln criticised and even abused in the south, where the Union forces were not in control. But as Mr. Buchanan was the pioneer in a national fast day and as Mr. Lincoln was the pioneer in national thanksgiving days it is well to remember that sectional conditions in a sectional war moved both and that the great national observance which we now have was born in the throes of fratricidal civic contention.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Murderers and Barbarians Barred.

A feast answering the purpose of our Thanksgiving day was held by the ancient Greeks in honor of Demeter, the deity who owned the earth in their eyes. The rallying point for this feast, which lasted nine days, was at Athens. All except murderers and barbarians took part in it. The fruits of the earth which seemed to please the Greeks most were barley, mint, pomegranates and poppy seeds. In addition to eating and drinking more than ordinarily, a grand torchlight procession along the "sacred way" to Eleusina was the chief attraction. The sacred way seems to have been to the ancient Greek what Fifth avenue is to the modern New Yorker.

Easily Pleased.

If you wish to make a Baganda perfectly happy, all you need to do is to say, "Way wally," which means a sort of supremely earnest "Well done." The moment this talismanic expression has left your lips the native to whom it is addressed will probably fall on his knees, and, clasping his two hands together, will sway them from side to side as if he were playing a concertina, while all the time his face beams with a most benignant and compulsive smile, and he purrs "A-a, a-o, a-o," as much as to say, "My cup of joy is overflowing."—Winston Churchill in Strand Magazine.

Fruitful Comparison.

"That girl is a peach," enthusiastically remarked a spectator.

"Yes," said another, "and she is the apple of her father's eye."

"She and young Binks would make a fine pair," suggested a third.

"But," objected another in the group, "a fellow like Binks would find her something of a lemon in the garden of love."

The cynical bystander who had been listening butted in at this point.

"I don't know the young lady," he said dryly, "but she seems to be very fruitful in her resources."

being private persons and one-fourth to communes. The average size of the plot is less than nine-tenths of an acre. They usually occupy the steepest, roughest, poorest ground. In this way land is put to use which would otherwise go to waste and if unwooded would lose its soil by the wash of the dashing rains.

From Japan's wood lots the yearly yield of lumber is about eighty-eight feet, board measure, an acre and three-fourths of a cord of firewood. In many cases the yield is much higher. More than 500,000,000 trees are planted yearly to make up what is cut for lumber and fuel.

With all the care in cutting and the industry in replanting it is by no means certain that Japan's forests are holding their own. If the preservation of the forests is doubtful there, it is evident that depletion must be alarmingly rapid in other countries which cut unsparingly and plant very little. On the other hand, it is encouraging to see what can be done with rough, steep and poor land. The United States has enough of that kind to grow billions of feet of lumber.—Pathfinder.

"Drunk With Thy Beauty."

Charles Dickens once had an argument with a friend about Byron's expression, "Drunk with thy beauty," to which he made great objection. During the discussion the novelist gazed as if enraptured at his host's fair haired daughter, who was in the room. At last he sprang to his feet, struck a dramatic attitude, clasped his heart with his hands and stalked to the window, where he wrote on the white woodwork:

O maiden of the amber dropping hair,
Would I, Byronically, thy praise might utter!
Drunk with thy beauty, would that I might dare
To breathe out paeans, borne upon a shutter!

Voted Twice.

Sir Gavan Duffy, formerly speaker of the legislative assembly of Victoria, was once returned to his seat by a single vote majority. On visiting his constituents subsequently, he was received with a special warmth by an Irish fellow countryman.

"And so," said Sir Gavan Duffy to his friend, "you were one of my supporters."

"No, sir," was the reply. "I was two of them."

Here is a simple home-made mixture as given by an eminent authority on Kidney diseases, who makes the statement that it will relieve almost any case of Kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the recipe. Try it:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

A well known druggist here in town is authority that these ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire Kidney and Urinary structure, and often overcomes the worst forms of Rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all blood disorders and cure the Rheumatism by forcing the Kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric acid and foul, decomposed waste matter, which cause these afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

Puts Up Her Medicines In Most Tempting Form.

Have you ever tasted anything more delicious than the fresh, ripe, luscious fruits? These are Nature's medicines.

A regular diet without fruit is positively dangerous, for the system soon gets clogged with waste matter and the blood poisoned. Fruit Juices stir up Bowels, Kidneys and Skin, making them work vigorously to throw off the dead tissue and indigestible food which, if retained, soon poison the blood and cause indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and a host of other distressing troubles.

But there is a quicker way to stimulate the organs to do their work properly. Take one or two "Fruit-a-lives" tablets every night, besides eating some fresh fruit every day. "Fruit-a-lives" combine the medicinal properties—many times intensified—of oranges, apples, prunes and figs, with the best tonics and internal disinfectants added.

Their action on Bowels, Liver, Kidneys and Skin is as natural as Nature's own, but quicker and more effective. Sold by all dealers—25c. for trial box—50c. for regular size—6 boxes for $2.50. Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

How the Rich of Westchester County, N. Y., Celebrate.

Rich residents in Westchester county, N. Y., celebrated last Thanksgiving day by having turkeys and dinners distributed among their poor neighbors, at hospitals and homes for poor children.

William Rockefeller, through his manager, had turkeys given to his employees, while Miss Helen Miller Gould, though she was far away on a trip, did not forget the little crippled boys at her home called Woodcrest, near Irvington. Every year the little tots who are educated by her special teachers are given a turkey dinner, and last year was no exception. Miss Gould sent word to have a special Thanksgiving feast served to them.

P. G. Thebaud, Howard Willets, A. C. Bostwick and other wealthy men had turkeys distributed among their poor neighbors. Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, who is president of the day nursery at New Rochelle, also arranged for dinners to be distributed. At the Wartburg farm and the Bedford Home For Women special dinners were served.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

Thanksgiving Day In Old New England.

A charming description of a New England Thanksgiving day fifty years ago is given by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe in one of her novels. Of all days in the year it was the one for which a new dress was imperatively demanded. New ways of making squash pies and quince tarts were proper subjects for conversation for some days before the feast. For a week before the date fixed the children of each homestead were kept busy chopping nice meat and pounding cinnamon, allspice and cloves in a wooden mortar, slicing candied orange peel and stoning raisins.

All the members of the family came home to eat their Thanksgiving dinner. The courses consisted of turkeys, chickens and chicken pies, then plum puddings and afterward pies. After the dinner the patriarch of the house gave a recital of all God's mercies to them, speaking from the text, "Let children hear the mighty deeds which God performed of old." That there is no present occasion for emulating their fathers' deeds is all the more reason for observing Thanksgiving day.

Thanksgiving In Moses' Day.

Over 3,000 years ago the Israelites wandering in the desert were instructed by Moses to observe a holiday similar in character to the modern American Thanksgiving day when they came to the promised land. It was called the feast of the tabernacles and took place about the end of harvest time. For eight days they dwelt in booths made of evergreens. They partook of corn, wine, oil and the fruits of the ground. The priests performed a magnificent ritual of which melodious choruses formed a large part.

Recent figures place the number of Protestant communicants in the United States at 32,283,658.

JUGGLERS OF INDIA.

One of the Wonderful Feats They Are Said to Perform.

Two men—one old and emaciated, carrying a native drum; the other young and well fed, fantastically gowned with an overskirt of colored handkerchiefs and a multitude of bells which jangle noisily at his slightest movement, long, ragged hair, altogether a hideous figure.

The drummer begins a weird tomtomming and the other man an incantation. Then he extends a "supra," a bamboo tray used by all natives, on which any one who pleases places a large handful of rice and the same quantity of grain. The two ingredients are thoroughly amalgamated, so that it would in the ordinary way take hours to separate them.

Now the fantastic man with his tray begins. He turns round slowly, gradually quickening his pace (the drummer also keeping time), faster and faster in a giddy vortex, the tray at times almost out of his hands, yet so cleverly handled that not a grain falls out. It is very trying to watch, but in a couple of minutes both stop simultaneously, and the man shows to the wondering spectators two little heaps, one of rice and the other grain, at different ends of the tray, which in his sickening gyrations he has been able to separate by some extraordinary manipulation.

SHE DESPAIRED.

Because Doctors Couldn't Help Her—South American Nerve Cured Her.

Mrs. Geo. Schlee, wife of a well-known contractor, of Berlin, Ont., was for about eight years unable to attend her household duties—at times confined to her bed—suffered great weakness and nervousness. She was wasted to a skeleton. She despaired of ever being well again. She was induced to try South American Nerve; a few doses gave great relief. She took in all eight bottles and was completely cured, and every day she sings the praises of this wonderful remedy. (11)

The Cause For Thanks

[Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe.]

"HONEST, if I had a figure like yours and such a peachy complexion I'd make a good match. Now, of course I've got nice hair and eyes, but a figure counts so much these days. It just sets off your clothes and makes you look like you were the real thing, don't you know. I couldn't help noticing how those two men at the next table watched you go down the aisle. Of course I ain't saying that I haven't my own good points, but with that figure you ought to do something for yourself."

The good natured head of stock who had managed to include the new salesgirl in the glove department in the pleasant little luncheon just concluded patted her pompadour, gave her four-in-hand tie a twitch and swept out of the dressing room.

The new salesgirl, otherwise Nellie Bender, lingered before the glass and, with an appreciative glance over her shoulder, drew down her girdle in the front to lengthen already strong Gibsonsque lines. Yes, she had a straight, slender, graceful figure which somehow made all her gowns set well, and above it was a rather pretty, girlish and ingenuous face.

Tom Willis thought it the loveliest face in the world, and he was forever telling its owner so. Perhaps that was where Tom made his mistake. Nellie had always felt so sure of him. And lately Tom had been very unreasonable would happen in her own home. Tom and his mother would come to dinner, and in the dusk Tom would take his mother to their tiny flat five blocks away and then come back for a two hour visit with her. Tom always went home early because he had to be at the shop every morning at 7.30.

The theater and afterward a supper just like this luncheon! The tiny parlor at home turned dingy and dull by comparison. When she and Tom went to the theater, which was rarely enough, they sat in the upper gallery and divided their attention between the boxes and the stage, the play and the wonderfully gowned women on the floor below.

And what was that Jennie Mills had said? With her figure she might wear such gowns, eat such luncheons every day—be the real thing!

She worked during the afternoon like a girl in a daze. Customers found fault with her, and the floorwalker echoed their complaints. She was tired and irritable when she started for home. It was raining, a cold, wind driven northeaster, and she had no umbrella. As she ran across the street to the subway entrance she was almost knocked down by a hansom whose fares consisted of a fur clad woman and a silk hatted man, who swore roundly as he saw the girl's narrow escape. Nellie's hand trembled with nervousness and anger as she bought her ticket. With her figure and face she might be sitting in a hansom some day instead of dodging one. But there was Tom. Oh, dear! Why had she been so hasty? She had been warned plenty times enough about marrying in haste and repenting at leisure. To be sure, she had known Tom six years.

A man stepped on her foot in the crowded train, and she drew in the injured member with a scowl that was scant reward for the man's apology. It was dreadful to have to ride twice a day in this mob.

The man seated next to her drew away from her, and she turned to see that he was endeavoring to protect a tissue paper covered parcel from the crush of swaying strap hangers in front of him.

"Say, look out, will you?" he said sharply to the long limbed youth who threatened the parcel as the car stopped suddenly. Then he turned to Nellie, with an apologetic smile:

"I don't mind the crowding so much usually, but these flowers are for my wife, and, by gorry, I'm going to get 'em home safe if I have to fight for 'em!"

Nellie looked at him in surprise. His hands were work worn, his clothes clean, but well worn, his tie distinctly rusty. But his happiness was infectious.

"Tomorrow's our wedding anniversary. Ain't it fine that it comes on Thanksgiving day this year? I tell you it makes me think how much more than ordinary I have to be thankful for. My wife's just back from the hospital, safe and well, thank God, and we're celebrating double tomorrow. I tell you, young woman, it's fierce to live three weeks alone with the woman you've loved thirty years lying twist life and death ten blocks away. I used to get so nervous some nights I'd go and walk up and down in front of the hospital where I could watch the light in her ward. So I thought we'd celebrate special this year, and I bought her some flowers—real flowers out of a real store, not those bargain bunches on the corner. And I got maidenhair fern 'stead of the Boston kind. She always did love maidenhair. And I got her a new dish, too—one of those bonbon dishes women are crazy about. It's glass with gold grapes on it, just as tiny and fine! I got it at a good store, too, and I put

ble. He had been angry when she had taken the position in the store. He was making $18 a week, with promotion just ahead. He wanted her to stay at home and study homemaking from her own capable mother, but Nellie wanted to earn enough money for her little trousseau. Tom had said openly that he hated her to pay the high price of standing day after day on her feet in the ill ventilated, noisy store. Secretly he had rather feared the influence of money making on this girl, who had always lived the sheltered home life. Perhaps she would not

DRS. KENNEDY & KENNEDY

Cor. Michigan Ave., and Griswold St., Detroit, Mich.

But little thought. I am not so openly that he hated her to pay the high price of standing day after day on her feet in the filthy ventilated, noisy store. Secretly he had rather feared the influence of money making on this girl, who had always lived the sheltered home life. Perhaps she would not be satisfied later on to give up her own income and share his in a modest home.

But something more dangerous than the mere effect of an independent income had entered Nellie's life that day. The representative of a big wholesale house had asked the head of stock under whom Nellie worked to make up a luncheon party of four. Any girl she asked would be agreeable, and he had an out of town man he wanted to entertain.

It was Nellie's first experience in a fashionable cafe, with its myriad mirrors, soft shod waiters, sparkling fountains and flower decked tables. The dainty cookery, the well chosen wines, the general air of prosperity and ease which enveloped her during the brief hour had created a new unrest in her mind, and the men had rounded out the meal by inviting the two girls to go to the theater the next night.

Nellie had fairly jumped at the suggestion. Theater on Thanksgiving night? Why, that was the time when folks stayed at home. She knew what those bargains bunched on the corner. And I got maldenhair fern 'stead of the Boston kind. She always did love maldenhair. And I got her a new dish, too—one of those bonbon dishes women are crazy about. It's glass with gold grapes on it, just as tiny and fine! I got it at a good store, too, and I bet that violet box they packed it in will tickle her to death. Funny how some women set store by little things like that. This is my station. I wonder if I can get through without breaking the stems."

Nellie looked after him with perplexed eyes. Thirty years—and this man with the rusty tie, the oft cleaned suit and the obviously slender purse was buying flowers from a real store for the woman he loved. The man on the other side rose to leave the car, dropping his paper. Nellie picked it up. Somehow she did not want to think. Big black headlines caught her eye.

"Countess — Sues Her Husband For Divorce, Cruelly Beaten. Her Pride Rebels."

And the countess had a lovely figure and a charming face and ate exquisite lunches every day in the year!

Nellie laid aside the paper and stared straight ahead until the guard called her station; then she went forth into the storm, with a shudder. She came back to grim realities. It was cold and rainy--and five blocks to her home. Suddenly by the glare of a pen- ant vender's oil light she saw a sturdy form step forth from the gloom. A strong arm drew her into the nearest doorway, and a hearty voice said:

"Never dreamed I could make it. Had to run from the shop to your house and then here, but something just told me you wouldn't have your raincoat or rubbers."

Tom was putting on her rubbers. Then he held the raincoat for her, fas- tened it at the throat with his own bungling fingers, smiling all the while into her tired face.

"This ain't as good as a hansom, Nell," he said as he tucked her arm under his, "but it'll have to do until I get my wages raised," and then he added, with a laugh, "Raised quite con- siderable too."

Nell clutched his arm tightly. How big and comforting he was and how much warmer she felt as he gripped the swaying umbrella and asked her if she was all right.

"Why, you silly, I'd cut a fine figure in a hansom, wouldn't I?" she asked merrily, but with a new note in her voice that Tom might have noticed if he had not been fighting that northeast wind. "And, oh, Tom, there was the funniest little man sitting next to me tonight on the train. He was having a special Thanksgiving celebration be- cause his wife was out of the hospital. And he was fifty, Tom, if he was a day. Fifty and still in love."

"Sure," said Tom placidly. "I'll be still loving you when I'm fifty too."

And then the friendly blackness of the quiet street swallowed them both, and Nellie deliberately cuddled her tired head against Tom's big, broad shoulder.

No Fires to Cook Their Turkeys.

Two hundred thousand people in twenty Missouri towns awoke on Nov. 29 last to learn that there was no fuel with which to cook their Thanksgiving turkeys. The natural gas, the only fuel used in this part of the state, was unobtainable owing to the bursting of a sixteen inch main at Altamont, Kan. Discarded stoves were dragged from cellars and storage rooms, and there was a scramble for fuel. In most of the homes the turkeys were served ex- ceedingly rare.

THE SECOND EMPIRE.

Two Picturesque Episodes in a Period of Unrest.

Walking about the streets, riding on buses, junketing up and down the river in steamboats, I was profoundly struck by the unrest among the people, their intense hatred of emperor and empress. One day I caught a glimpse of Rochefort, carried aloft on the shoulders of a mob of students throughing the Boulevard Saint Michel. I never saw a man looking so help- lessly frightened as did the founder of the Lanterne, then in its prime. Whether he feared the police or a fall I do not know, but his terror was ab- ject.

In the summer time the emperor paid a visit to Beauvais. On the chance of getting material for an ar- ticle acceptable in London I journeyed thither with North Peat, who went down as representative of the Morning Star. The prince imperial accompanied the emperor, who drove through living lanes of people stretching from the roadway to the open windows of the topmost chamber. They came to see, but they would not remain to cheer. The occasion was the presentation of prizes gained at the local Lycee. The head prize was never delivered, the winner, a lad of fourteen, declining to accept it from the hand of the hated emperor.—H. W. Lucy in Cornhill Magazine

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber.
November 2nd. 1908.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor H. Meng in the chair.

Present—Reeve Symington and Councillors Alexander, Steacy, Simp- son, Denison, Osborne and Kimmerly. The minutes of the last two sessions were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From nightwatch E. B. Perry, ask- ing that his salary be increased to $5 per week. The revenues from other sources which went to make up the nightwatchman's salary were falling off, and to make the job worth while an increase from the town was neces- sary. Referred to the Police Committee to report.

From Hugh Cameron & Co., Toron- to, in reference to hose wagon for fire department. An illustrated catalogue accompanied the communication.

Laid on the table until later in the evening.

From J. J. Graham, chief of police, asking for ten days of absence, com- mencing on November 7th, during which time he expects to be away from town.

Moved by Reeve Symington, second- ed by Coun. Denison, that the request be granted, provided he supply a sub- stitute suitable to the Police Com- mittee. Carried.

From Mrs. M. Richardson saying she had received a bill from the town treasurer for $3.00 on account of East street sewer. She had signed the petition for the construction of the sewer, but did not intend paying the account, as said sewer was not put down deep enough to drain the cellar. She also asked the council to pay her $8.10, the amount expended in putting a drain from her residence to connect with sewer, which was a useless ex- penditure. Referred to Streets Com- mittee to report.

From Inspector of Prisons and Char- itable Institutions stating that there was one patient in the Kingston Asy- lum for which the town was liable to the amount of ten cents per day.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, second- ed by Coun. Osborne, that the commu- nication be referred to the Finance Com- mittee to ascertain whether the patient belongs to this municipality, and ascertain the facts of the case and report. Carried.

From Ira Jaynes asking for payment of an account of $80 which he claims is due him as pound-keeper and for car- ing for animal impounded.

Referred to Finance Committee with power to act.

The treasurer's regular monthly statement was read, which is as follows:

ADJUSTED HIS CANE.

Then the Man From Berlin Explained Why He Did It.

A man stood before a shop window with his cane sticking out from under his arm. A stout, blond gentleman in passing struck the cane smartly with his own, restoring it from its oblique horizontal position to the proper vertical one.

"Say, what's the matter with you? You're the freshest guy I ever saw. Are you looking for trouble?"

Thus said the man whose cane had been tapped. But he who had tapped it, speaking with a German accent, answered gently:

"Why, sir, I did nothing but restore your cane to its right inclination. Absently you were holding it under your arm. It was jabbing people in the breast, the back, even the eye, and yet you meant no harm."

"Well, I stopped that nuisance which you were unconsciously committing. In Berlin it is the custom always to stop it so. And no one takes offense. On the contrary, in Berlin the correction is received with a smile and a word of thanks. Isn't it so here?"

"No, it isn't," said the other, "but it should be. I thank you, sir, myself, and I apologize."

John Wesley's Prescription.

"Here is a rare little book," said a Methodist local preacher. "It is John Wesley's 'Primitive Physick.' Wesley dabbled in medicine, setting a fashion that has not yet died out. Did you ever know a Methodist minister who didn't dabble in medicine?"

The full title of the volume was "Primitive Physick; or, An Easy and Natural Method of Curing Most Diseases." The local preacher said that he had paid $40 for the book, but that as a medical work it was not really worth 40 cents. To show the weakness of John Wesley's doctoring he quoted the following consumption cure:

"Every morning cut up a little turf of fresh earth and, lying down, breathe into the hole for a quarter of an hour. I have known a deep consumptive cured thus."

The Letters He Dictated.

"Well, goodby, dear," said Mr. Trueboy to his beloved spouse. "I must go and dictate those letters—twenty-six of them—so you mustn't expect me home very early."

"All right," was the response. "But I wish you wouldn't work so hard."

Half an hour later Mr. Trueboy entered his club and sat down, with three others, at a card table.

"Just a moment, you fellows, before the first hand is dealt. I've got to keep my word with my wife. One of you just take down what I dictate: 'A b c d e f g h i j k l m n o p q r s t u v w x y z.' There, those letters are off my mind!"

Willie Has Such an Active Brain.

"Was Daniel really such a wise man, mamma?" asked Willie thoughtfully.

"Yes, dear, as wise almost as Solomon, Willie."

"Well, mother, I bet Solomon would have done better than Daniel did, anyway," continued Willie.

"Why, what do you mean, my son?"

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells, with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention.

In such cases the one sure remedy which speedily removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. J. A. Laliberte, of 34 Artillerie Street, Quebec, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For six years I have been doctoring for female weakness, heart and nerves, liver and kidney trouble, but in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I can safely say I have found a cure."

"I was continually bothered with the most distressing backaches, headaches, and bearing down pains, and I kept growing more and more nervous."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of all these distressing symptoms and made me a well woman. I would advise all suffering women, young or old, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

A DRAMATIC CLIMAX.

Effect of One Woman's Pathetic Eyes Upon a Jury.

James T. Brady, who was one of New York's greatest lawyers, was once counsel for a young woman in a case involving an attempt to break a will.

His client sat by his side. She was a very beautiful young woman, whose eyes seemed always to rivet the attention of those upon whom her glance fell. There was a pathetic expression which affected every one. She sat watching the jury during the course of the trial, and at last there was some complaint that she was attempting by means of her glances to excite the sympathy of the jury.

Then Mr. Brady arose and in one of the most touching and beautiful of all the addresses he ever made in court spoke of the blessings which every one who had an appreciation of beautiful things and could see them enjoyed and dwell for some moments upon the happy lot of the jury who could see the budding of the flowers—it was then springtime and the charms of nature. Then, suddenly turning to his client, he said, "That blessing is denied my client, for, though she has eyes which seem to look upon you, gentlemen, there is no vision in them, for her sight has been taken from her."

She had been, in fact, the victim of total paralysis of the optic nerve, which had not impaired the beauty of her eyes, but had given to them that singular pathetic expression which she was thus falsely charged with employing that she might secure the sympathies of the jury.

likely to be most wanted, and the prospects of famine were so bright that Governor Bradford, acting in the undoubted exercise of his prerogative, ordered a day to be set apart for fasting, humiliation and prayer.

But before the day appointed had come provisions turned up all right, and the day was turned into one of thanksgiving. Mr. Winslow, one of the pilgrims, in a letter gives an interesting account of this memorable day in American history. The celebration was held with "glory, honor and praise, with all thankfulness to our good God which deals so graciously with us." Ninety Indians, headed by King Massasoit, arrived at the settlement in the nick of time and shared in the feast. This celebration was somewhat previous, for not long after the pilgrims were down to plain winters without bread, and spring water, "which," said Governor Bradford, "somewhat impaired the freshness of our complexions," as well it might. — Boston Transcript.

The members of the American society and their guests, to the number of more than 500, gathered on Nov. 29 last year at the Hotel Cecil for the annual Thanksgiving dinner of the society. The dining hall and the tables were decorated with products of field and garden and favors. The menu was in the shape of a pumpkin, to which was attached a corn husk. Ambassador Reid, Robert J. Wynne, the American consul general, the embassy staff and the head masters of England's great public schools were among the guests of the evening. John Morgan Richards, father of the late Mrs. Craigie, presided.

After the toast to King Edward had been honored the Rev. Edward Littleton, head master of Eton, proposed the health of President Roosevelt. He said that, speaking for the schoolboys of England, no living personage was as interesting as the American president, whose sportsmanship, honesty and strength had made him the admiration of both English boys and men. The speaker declared President Roosevelt to be the most important figure in civilization.

LIKE THORNS IN THE FLESH

Are the Sharp Twinges and Tortures of Rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a Certain Cure.

The twinges and the tortures of rheumatism are not due to cold, damp weather as so many people imagine. Rheumatism comes from poisonous acid in the blood. The pain may be started by cold weather, damp weather or by keen winds. There is only one way to cure rheumatism. It must be treated through the blood. All the liniments and rubbing, and so-called electrical treatment in the world will not cure rheumatism. The acid that causes the disease must be driven out of the blood and the blood enriched and purified. It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, red blood that they have cured thousands of cases of rheumatism after all other treatment had failed. As a proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do even in the most severe cases of rheumatism, the case of Mr. David Carroll, a well known furniture dealer at Picton, N. S., may be cited. Mr. Carroll says:—"I have been a most severe sufferer from rheumatism, and in the hope that some other poor sufferer may find relief from my experience I gladly write you of the benefit I have received from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The trouble settled in my shoulders and down my sides and at times I was quite unable to raise my arm. I was attended by a doctor, but as I did not appear to be getting any better I sent for a so-called electric belt for which I paid $40.00. It did not do me any good and then I tried another remedy, but without any better results. A friend asked me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got three boxes, by the time I had used them all I found the stiffness and pain less severe, and I got another half dozen boxes. When I had taken these every symptom of the trouble had disappeared and in the two years that have since passed I have had no return of the trouble. I believe there is no other medicine equal to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for curing this most painful trouble, and I have recommended the Pills to others who have been benefitted by their use."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only cure rheumatism, but all the other diseases due to poor watery blood, such as anaemia, indigestion, nervous disorders, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis, and the ailments of girlhood and womanhood, with their headaches, backaches, side aches and attendant miseries. Only the genuine Pills can do this and you should see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Time Heals Most Wounds

A Tale of Love and Disappointment

CHAPTER I.

The late Prime Minister could have chosen no one more competent than the Right Hon. Felix Shelby to be his literary executor. A great friendship had existed between them that had never been marred by those political disagreements which are so apt to be fierce, and estrange the closest relationships. But the task, a difficult and responsible one, was proving a great consumer of time to a busy man; for Mr. Shelby was a member of the present Cabinet. He, too, was an eminent man of letters, and it was felt by the public that Providence had designated him as the only possible person who could fitly write the biography for which the world was waiting impatiently.

In front of him lay three open deed boxes, which were filled with letters and documents. Now and again he would take up a paper—glance through it—and throw it back with the others.

"An endless task," he muttered to himself, "I must have some assistance."

He threw himself back into an arm-chair—crossed his legs, and his head seemed to sink into his shoulders; a pose that had been immortalized by Punch.

He was interrupted by the entrance of a servant.

"A Mr. Ackroyd to see you sir," he said in that suave, smooth voice so affected by the well-trained servant.

"Ackroyd—Ackroyd," Mr. Shelby repeated to himself. Recollection appeared to come to him, for he rose briskly from his chair.

"Ask him in, James."

The door opened, and there appeared a tall, clean-shaven man of quiet appearance. He was well groomed, and his clothes were neatly pressed, but there was a tell-tale shabbiness at the seams that betokened much wear.

"How do you do, Ackroyd? It is a long time since I have seen you."

"Yes, Mr. Shelby, but I haven't cared to worry you with my troubles."

"Troubles? I am sorry to hear that. Let me see—you are writing, are you not?"

"Yes, and I have not found it very profitable. But your time is valuable, I know, so I will at once come to the object of my visit. Can you find me a billet of any kind? To be frank, I am 'broke.' I thought perhaps in memory of our 'Varsity' days, you might—"

"Quite right, Ackroyd; I am glad you came to me. In fact you are the very man for whom I am seeking, and you will really be doing me a favor by taking some work off my hands."

"It is very good of you to put it in that way—if you only knew what it means to me at the present time," said Ackroyd.

"We all have our 'ups and downs.' But I am surprised that you are not at the top of the tree. We all prophesied a great future—for you were the man of promise of our once more began his work, and kept steadily on until Mr. Shelby made his appearance.

"Rather tedious, isn't it?" he remarked kindly.

"Yes, there is a tremendous lot of twaddle here, but I think there is a good deal of material for your book."

"That is excellent. But I think you have done enough to-day. Needless to say the work is not very pressing, and so you may take your own time for it. This room is always at your disposal."

"Thanks once more, Shelby. I am very grateful to you."

"Nonsense. It's the other way about. Good-bye for the present."

Ackroyd's first move was to go to the bank to cash the cheque which he had received, and the jingle of gold in his pockets immediately raised his spirits. Then he took a cab to the Temple, where he shared residential chambers with a barrister friend.

He at once started work to decipher the letters, and his expression brightened as he mastered the contents.

"A gold mine," he muttered hoarsely. "Let me recapitulate the facts, and I shall know what cards I hold."

"Some thirty years ago the Earl of Wolverholme was sent to St. Petersburg by the British Government to negotiate a private treaty with Russia. He enjoyed the absolute confidence of that Prime Minister and was given plenary powers. It appears that the worthy Earl was contemplating marriage, but that his affairs were heavily involved. The negotiations were concluded, and very successfully—from the Russian point of view. As a reward for his complacency, and for the sale of his country's interests, the Earl received a heavy bribe. And here's the evidence of it," Ackroyd cried triumphantly.

He gathered from the papers that the receipt of this bribe had come to the knowledge of the Prime Minister. A scandal would have been very inadvisable, so the affair had been hushed up, and the Earl had been permitted to retire. And now every one that knew of his treachery contained the only evidence of his perfidy.

The Earl enjoyed universal respect, and was amongst the gayest, the wittiest, and most popular of the social leaders of the world. Here in the hands of an unscrupulous man rested a weapon that could hurl him from his proud position.

Ackroyd went to a small club of which he was a member, and busied himself with works of reference. He found that the Earl had long been a widower, and that there was issue of the marriage, namely one son, Lord Harecastle, who was approaching his thirtieth birthday.

At the time that Ackroyd was gathering this information the Earl was at his club, impatiently awaiting his son's arrival. Tall, of robust figure, he carried lightly his seventy odd years, but his face did understand, the wish had met with stout opposition from his father. There was deep affection between them, and he had forgone his desire. He was not one to easily make friendships, and his life had been a lonely one. A cold aloof manner covered great shyness, as is so often the case. His life had been untouched by love until he met Ethel Fetherston, but in her he met his heart's desire. Many found fault with her pride, but to him it was attraction, for he had no sympathy for the gush and lack of reserve which is so characteristic of the woman of the present day.

He was convinced that she loved him deeply, and it pleased him to think that in her his father would find a daughter after his own heart.

She met him quietly and calmly, but her face flushed hotly as he pressed her lips to his.

"I've brought you this," he said simply, as he produced a ring from his pocket, and slipped it on to her finger.

"How sweet!" she answered with a smile of quiet happiness.

"I can hardly realize my good luck, dearest. What is there in me to command your love?" he asked softly.

"Do you really wish me to tell you, or are you asking for a complimentary speech?"

"Tell me," he said earnestly. "I know very little of your sex. My life has been lived very much alone. What do you women love in men?"

"That depends upon the woman. But for myself—honor, clean living; a man who keeps his word; one upon whom we can rely, not for a moment, but for a lifetime. And I believe I have found one," she said softly.

"My darling," he replied passionately. "You may trust me with your life. I cannot put my feelings into words, but I love you, worship you. Your beauty, your purity, the perfect you, has won my heart."

Her pale face flushed, and she placed her hand in his.

"I think you would be very unforgiving," he said reflectively.

"Not unforgiving, but I could be relentless, if I found that my trust was misplaced; but I have no fear."

He smiled gravely. "I am trying to understand you, Ethel. You must teach me."

An affectionate smile was her reply.

"I am going to Wolverholme Castle in the morning. I want to tell the Earl the news. He was in town to-day, but was rather upset, so I thought it better to wait until to-morrow. He will be delighted at my choice. Have you told any one of our engagement?"

"Only Cicely Stanton. We are such old friends, you know. You don't mind, do you?"

CZARINA A SAD FIGURE.

Wife of Russia's Ruler is Embodiment of Melancholy.

The Czarina is certainly one of the saddest figures in the Russian world. Her face has melancholy written upon it—melancholy and resignation. Brought up in the narrow atmosphere which surrounded her mother, the Princess Alice, she had a youth full of depressing incidents. She was taught to be extremely frugal, to content herself with a few shillings a week as pocket-money, to examine into the possible results of all her actions and to find a reason for all she did. This scrupulousness led to an immense amount of hesitation as to the change required in her religion when she married the present Czar, and she was miserably unhappy when the change took place. The Czar begged her to marry him long before she would consent. He used to follow her about in his patient way whenever she stayed with her sister, the Grand Duchess Serge, and steadfastly refused to accept her "No" for an answer. Now, however, she has become more Russian than many Russians. She has superstitions and dreams, and this melancholy characteristic, even in her girlhood, has deepened until her life is one long sadness.

INDISPENSIBLE TO MOTHERS.

"I am satisfied that Baby's Own Tablets are indispensable to mothers," says Mrs. Abraham Boucher, Pierreville Mills, Que., and she adds: "Before using the Tablets my baby was cross, peevish and not thriving well; but the Tablets have worked a great change and my little one is well and happy." This is the verdict of all mothers who have used these Tablets. And better still, mothers have the guarantee of a government analyst that Baby's Own Tablets are absolutely safe—that they contain not one particle of opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

As a pleasant-faced woman passed the corner Harris touched his hat to her and remarked to his companion: "Ah, my boy, I owe a great deal to that woman." "Your mother?" was the query. "No; my landlady."

Any person who drinks 25c tea and once tastes 30c "Salada" will see that it is not only finer in flavor, but that as one pound makes many more cups, it is economical to use.

ENOUGH TO WAKE THEM.

"It's wonderful," said Dubley, "how wide awake the Japanese have become in recent years." "Oh, it's not so wonderful," replied the observant man, "when you consider that they have an earthquake every night or so in their country."

Regarded as one of the most potent compounds ever introduced with which to combat all summer complaints and inflammation of the bowels, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial has won for itself a reputation that no other cordial for the purpose can aspire to. For young and old suffering from these complaints, it is the best medicine that can be procured.

me a favor by taking a whole lot of my hands."

"It is very good of you to put it in that way—if you only knew what it means to me at the present time," said Ackroyd.

"We all have our 'ups and downs.' But I am surprised that you are not at the top of the tree. We all prophesied a great future—for you were the man of promise of our year."

A bitter smile appeared on Ackroyd's face, but only for a moment, and he turned to the other with a forced cheerfulness.

"A promise that was not to fructify, as happens in so many cases," he said quietly. "But what can I do for you?"

"I am the literary executor of the late Prime Minister. Those three boxes contain a quantity of miscellaneous correspondence. I want them to be carefully read, and the important ones set on one side. You will understand that it is somewhat delicate, as the private correspondence is included, but of course I trust you, Ackroyd."

"Thank you. When do you wish me to begin?"

"The sooner the better. As for the financial part of it—perhaps we had better settle that when the work is finished."

He sat down at his desk and filled in a cheque.

"This will do to go along with, eh?" he remarked with a smile, as he handed him the slip of paper.

"You are more than generous." "Nonsense, nonsense. Come along with me. There is a room that I can place at your disposal, and you can commence as soon as you like."

Julian Ackroyd was alone with the papers. There was no smile of gratification on his face, although this employment had come to him at the moment that he had reached the end of his resources. But it was not the first time that he had faced starvation.

A man of consummate ability, but from the outset he had been cursed with the propensity of spending more money than he earned. Had he been content to live quietly upon the fair income that he derived from his writing, he would doubtless have made his mark. The need of money drove him to the City, where he engaged in "wild-cat" financial schemes. Upon occasions there had been every prospect of success and wealth, but some imp of bad luck had pursued him through life, and he was forced back to literature for a bare living. He had set out in life with a character of average morality, but contact with people of shady principles had gradually debased him, until he had resolved to make money in any way possible, whether honest or otherwise.

He listlessly began to turn over the papers. The work was not congenial, for he had no admiration for the late Prime Minister, but soon his interest was aroused.

"Rather indiscreet, some of these letters," he muttered to himself. "I wonder Shelby trusted me with them."

At last he came to a bundle consisting of half a dozen letters.

"Written in cipher. This ought to be something important. Some Foreign Office business, I expect," he said to himself.

The deciphering of codes was a hobby of Ackroyd's, and it was not long ere he discovered the key, which was a simple one. He read two or three lines, and drew a deep breath. A rapid glance at the door, and he hurriedly placed the letters in his breast pocket. He

He found that the Earl had long been a widower, and that there was issue of the marriage, namely one son, Lord Harecastle, who was approaching his thirtieth birthday.

At the time that Ackroyd was gathering this information the Earl was at his club, impatiently awaiting his son's arrival. Tall, of robust figure, he carried lightly his seventy odd years, but his face did not wear its customary genial smile. At last he rose and went to the dining room, but he had only just taken his seat at a table, when he was joined by his son.

"Good evening—father, an unexpected visit."

"Yes, Cyril, and an unpleasant one. But sit down. We will dine. I have not much time to spare, for I am going to the Castle to-night."

"To-night?" Harecastle repeated in surprise.

"Yes. The house is full, you know. And why aren't you down there?" he asked irritably.

"I have been rather busy," Harecastle replied with a slight flush.

"Rubbish! You had better come down to-night."

"Sorry, but I cannot. To-morrow, if you like. Who is there at the Castle?"

"Josephs and his daughter. And the sister, Mrs. Goldberg. Lady Hesty, and two or three others."

"Why did not you let me know earlier that you were coming to town?"

"My decision was sudden. I have been to see Lockyer."

"Sir Simeon Lockyer, the specialist? Surely there's nothing the matter with you, father?"

Cyril leaped over the table and looked anxiously at him.

"I am sorry to say there is, but I want you to keep it quiet. He describes it as temporary heart failure. I have had one or two bouts lately, and I was getting nervous."

"Is it serious?"

The Earl smiled whimsically. "He does not say that I am going to die at once, but I must take care. Lead a quiet kind of life and all that kind of thing. It will be a wretched existence."

"I am deeply sorry, father, but you will take care of yourself?"

"Yes, I still find life pleasant, and worth the living. I don't want you to worry about it. Cyril, but I thought it better that you should know."

"I am very glad that you told me," Cyril replied with a look of affection.

"I will drive you to the station," he continued. "I have the car here."

They reached the station in good time, and he stood at the window of the carriage till the train moved off.

"I will be down to-morrow afternoon, certain. I may have some news for you. Good-bye, and take care of yourself," he called after his father.

He returned to his car, and directed the driver to go to an address in Eaton Square. He was on his way to the house of Ethel Fetherston, to whom he had been engaged for the last three days. The engagement had not been announced, and it had been his intention to tell his father at the club, but the news of his illness upset him, and he thought it better to defer the telling until the morrow.

Much against his will, Lord Harecastle had led a life of idleness. It had been his wish to enter the Diplomatic Service, but for some reason which he could not

DISEASES.

26 (Special).—That Kidney Disease, neglected in its earlier stages, leads to the most terrible suffering, if not death itself, and that the one sure cure for it in all stages is Dodd's Kidney Pills, is the experience of Mr. James E. Brant, a farmer residing near here.

Mr. Brant contracted Kidney Disease, when a young man, from a strain, and like hosts of others, neglected it, expecting it to go away itself.

But it kept gradually growing worse, till after thirty years of increasing suffering the climax came, and he found himself so crippled that at times he could not turn in bed, and for two weeks at a time it was impossible for him to rise from a chair without putting his hands on his knees.

He could not button his clothes. He was troubled with Lumbago, Gravel and Backache, and tried medicines for each and all of them without getting relief, till good luck turned him to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Dodd's Kidney Pills started at the cause of his troubles and cured his Kidneys. With cured Kidneys his other troubles speedily disappeared, and to-day he is a well man.

If you cure your Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills you will never have Lumbago, Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Dropsy or Bright's Disease.

GERMANY NEEDS MORE ROOM.

Extended Colonial Possessions Absolutely Necessary.

Herr Rohrbach, the well known writer on political questions, has just published a book on Germany's position in the world, which is the occasion of a remarkable article in Die Post.

According to the Post, Germany at the present moment is in the same state of ferment which characterized her in the years from 1882 to 1884, those years, namely, when she acquired her extensive colonial possessions. From the German nation rises a voice that the people are not satisfied with things as they are. This voice says that Germans are too many on a too limited area, and cries out for opportunities of expansion; more elbow room.

Germany is different from other European powers, says this article. It is not satisfied to take up a secondary position like Italy and Austria-Hungary; it is not rotten financially like Russia; its population does not remain dangerously stationary like that of France.

Mr. L. A. Cote, Assistant Manager Hotel Victoria, Quebec, Can., writes:

"I suffered with catarrh for about eight years, and have tried many physicians or specialists for this sickness, and never obtained any relief. It was only after using your Peruna medicine that I began to get better. I have used ten bottles up till now, and am glad to say that I am completely cured. I am glad to let the public know it. A good thing is never too dear."

We have on file many testimonials like the one given here. Probably no other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

"The sun of the future smiles on the three great Germanic nations, Great Britain, the United States and Germany; but to secure our promising position we must have a strong fleet. As Germany's fleet is only in the building, and will require ten years before it is of use, it is, of course, only prudent to avoid every conflict with other powers. It would almost appear as though in recent years Germany had become a sort of Cinderella among the other nations, or, like Schiller's poet, had arrived too late on the scene."

The Post states that, according to Dr. Rohrbach, Germany's African possessions will only be able to support a white population of 100,000, but Anatolia, Mesopotamia and Southern America still offer numerous possibilities. Something must be done if Germany's population, which will shortly reach 80,000,000 is to be adequately cared for.

Let us, however, be patient, advises the Post. Who thought of Schleswig-Holstein and Alsace-Lorraine in 1860; who of African possessions embracing over 2,000,000 ers, and brought up their children better than themselves, with the result that no family of any consequence keeps up the old Turkish customs in their entirety. Thus very few modern Turks have more than one wife, the life in their houses is quite European, including their dress, mode of living, food, etc. Only out-of-doors do they wear the veil as before.

But the women want more; they want to institute home life, and many have done so already. They also desire to receive visitors without restriction, and adopt more becoming dress in public. The educated Turks have no objection to this, provided the change is not too quick, as they also have mixed in foreign society and feel the want of ladies in Turkish society. If it remained with this class alone the change would come rapidly, but there are the common classes and the country people, who cannot understand it, and can never imagine any change by which their women folk should be anything else than what they have been for centuries.

And it is noteworthy that in the provinces that whenever reactionaries have tried to start a movement against the constitution they have always declared that one of the first objects of the constitution would be the complete emancipation of the women and their going about unveiled, and this has never failed to excite the people, as was the case at Medina, where the situation was saved by the arrival of a number of troops and the arrest of the agitators. This is the reason Prince Sabah ed Din in his speech last week, specially spoke to women, counseling prudence and moderation.

GETTING TIRED.

An Irishman applied for a job at the docks. At first they said he was too small, but he finally persuaded them to give him a trial.

He seemed to be making good progress, and they gradually increased the size of his load, until on the last trip he was carrying a three-hundred-pound anvil. When he was half-way across the gangway taking his load on board ship he fell into the water.

With a great splashing and spluttering he came to the surface.

"Throw me a rope, I say!" he shouted, and again he sank.

A second time he rose to the surface.

"Thow me a rope, I say!" he shouted again. Once more he sank.

A third time he rose struggling. Then he spluttered angrily:

"If one av you spalpeens don't hurry up and throw me a rope, I'm going to drop this blessed anvil!"

10. The Difference Between Poor and Good Cabinet Work

¶ It is a fact not generally known that very few sewing machine manufacturers produce their own cabinet work. This is a distinct industry in itself.

¶ The Singer Company owns and operates the largest and best equipped factory in the world, exclusively devoted to the production of the highest grade sewing machine cabinet work.

¶ Only the finest woods procurable are used. To insure the proper selection of these woods, a corps of expert wood rangers is employed, whose duty it is to purchase individual trees, the grain and growth of which entitle them to use in Singer cabinet work.

¶ This is why Singer cabinet work, besides being the most durable, is also the most beautiful,—the Singer process brings out all the richness and natural beauty of the wood.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER
SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS

I am a woman.
I know a woman's sufferings.
I have found a cure.

I will mail, free of charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about the cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourself at home, without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for all female weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer, if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, on irrefragable, plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER," with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Painful and Irregular Menstruation in young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases and makes women strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address: MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box 103, Windsor, Ont.

A nation with a history of 2,000 years, with an upward tendency, can wait until the ripe grapes fall at her feet. Everything is ready. It is only necessary that German leaders keep their eyes open and miss no opportunity of seizing the chance when the time comes.

HOW HE WAS BOUNDED.

"Do you know your orders, sentry?" asked an Irish officer of the soldier on guard-duty.

"Yes, sor," was the prompt reply.

"Know the points of the compass?" continued the officer.

"Yes, sor."

"If you face the rising sun, your left hand would be on the north of you, and your right hand to the south of you. What would be behind you?"

"The knapsack, sor."

It will be noticed in the Singer Sewing Machine Company's advertisement that there are three addresses at the bottom of the announcement. Any one writing will please address them at the nearest one of the three places to his post office.

DEMANDS OF TURKISH WOMEN

Want Home Life as It Obtains in Other Countries.

One of the most difficult questions which will have to be solved by new Turkey is that of the future of Turkish women. It has already given rise to considerable discussion, and will sooner or later become a national question.

For many years among the better classes there has been a steady movement toward emancipation, and the old Turkish life has practically disappeared in all the houses of the educated people. The change came with education, as the daughters of the house were trained by foreign governesses. They began to read foreign literature and ap-

"To the Zam-Buk Co.,

"Gentlemen,—After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. In my case it cured a skin rash of five years standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for.

"I would certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in their home. It truly does even more than you claim for it. For my own part I would not now be without it in the house. Yours very truly, (Signed) "Roger B. Perry,

"Justice of the Peace for B. C."

Zam-Buk differs from ordinary salves and embrocations, for while these mostly contain animal oils and fats, Zam-Buk is purely herbal. It soothes and heals cuts, sores, ulcers, eruptions, boils, eczema, chafing sores, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50 cents a box, or from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 6 boxes for $2.50.

"He got the hook."

PLEASE BEAR IN MIND that what is called a skin disease may be but a symptom of bad blood. In that case, Weaver's Eczema externally applied, should be supplemented with Weaver's Syrup, taken daily.

DISAGREEABLE DIFFERENCE.

"Why is a gun like a cat?" asked the conundrum fiend.

"I dunno," replied the victim.

"Because they both go off."

"But there's a difference."

"What is it?"

"The cat comes back."

It is an Officer of the Law of Health.—When called in to attend a disturbance it searches out the hiding-place of pain, and like a guardian of the peace, lays hands upon it and says, "I arrest you." Resistance is useless, as the law of health imposes a sentence of perpetual banishment on pain, and Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil was originated to enforce that sentence.

Cruel Annam Emperor Condemned to Perpetual Exile.

Than Thai, King, or, as he is sometimes called, Emperor of Annam, the most fantastically cruel monarch of modern times, has been condemned to perpetual exile in Algeria by the French Government.

Than Thai murdered twenty of his pretty little wives with tortures of inconceivable cruelty and horror.

Annam is a large country of south-eastern Asia, which is under a French protectorate. France permits the native Emperor to rule his own country absolutely in internal affairs except where French interests are specially concerned. Thus it happened that the Emperor was at liberty to carry on murder and torture in his harem for many weeks before anybody ventured to interfere.

Finally the French authorities broke into the Emperor's palace, which he had turned into a morass of blood, and seized the crazy monarch. That was nearly two years ago. Since then the Emperor has been kept under restraint and close observation.

Prevent Disorder.—At the first symptoms of internal disorder, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills should be resorted to immediately. Two or three of these salutary pellets, taken before going to bed, followed by doses of one or two pills for two or three nights in succession, will serve as a preventive of attacks of dyspepsia and all the discomforts which follow in the train of that fell disorder. The means are simple when the way is known.

QUININE IN ITALY.

State Sells It and Uses the Profit to Fight Malaria.

The sale of quinine in Italy is carried on in a peculiar fashion. The Government sells the drug to the peasants in malarious districts and then uses the profit to fight malaria.

The first aim is to protect the peasants from mosquitoes. But it is almost impossible to get them to take care of the wire screens which are given them for their houses.

As for their wearing veils and gloves when they go abroad, as they are urged by the authorities to do, anybody who knows the Italian peasants can guess how many of them will do it.

The Government has therefore to depend chiefly on draining and filling up the pools where mosquitoes breed and on what is called bonificamento, or the improvement of the land in various ways. Last year the Government sold to the peasants about $500,000 worth of quinine, with a net profit of about $75,000.

Do Not Delay.—When, through debilitated digestive organs, poison finds its way into the blood, the prime consideration is to get the poison out as rapidly and as thoroughly as possible. Delay may mean disaster. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a most valuable and effective medicine to assail the intruder with. They never fail. They go at once to the seat of the trouble and work a permanent cure.

"Depressing sort of day, this," said the guest at the small hotel, sitting down to breakfast. "Yes, sir," said the waiter. "Even the milk, you will notice, has got the blues badly."
